The book you are holding in your hands is something of a miracle. The year it chronicles is one few institutions in history have experienced, a year in which Hurricane Katrina brought about cataclysmic change to one of the world's greatest cities and universities. It was a year of tragedy and triumph, of devastation and determination.

In light of the events of the past year, this "Jambalaya" is a kind of metaphor for what people of character do when they are faced with life-changing events. They gather the pieces that remain, assess what is most important in their lives and begin the long road to recovery. They also remember. They remember the lives lost, the treasures washed away, the friends and families still far away.

This yearbook memorializes what we have endured but, more importantly, it celebrates what we have overcome, what we are and what we will be in the future. Katrina changed many things but the Tulane spirit and mission, our life-saving research, our constant pursuit of scholarship, our creation and preservation of knowledge, the joy of discovery and lifelong friendship our students experience remain as vibrant as ever. As I stated soon after the storm, Tulane will do more than just survive; we will thrive and continue our role as a beacon of learning and research for the region and nation, as well as a dynamic engine of growth and change for New Orleans and its citizens.

So I hope you enjoy and treasure this special edition of the "Jambalaya." It contains the things that are most important to us which, as it turns out, are not things at all but the students, faculty and staff who comprise the wonderful community of Tulane University.

Scott Cowen
President, Tulane University

RENE

When Tulane University officials returned to New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina, they began the process of renewal and rebirth by adopting a plan to restructure and reorganize the Tulane community. As “Save Engineering” signs began adorning Tulane’s walls along with other angry anti-Renewal Plan sentiments, administrators continually defended the plan as an inevitable extension of cost and strategic concerns.

“The Board of Administrators, the president and I all were unhappy and distressed about having to make cuts in the university,” Provost Lestor Lefton said. “[If not] for Katrina, such changes never would have been made. In the aftermath of Katrina, Tulane’s administration and board were faced immediately with securing the survival and recovery of the institution.”

Tulane University suffered approximately $150 million in operating losses and $250 million in property damages as a result of Hurricane Katrina. To offset these monumental losses, Tulane made strategic cuts in athletics, business, engineering and clinical medical operations in the School of Medicine.

In a live chat Dec. 9, 2005, University President Scott Cowen announced to students, faculty and parents that several doctoral programs would be phased out and eventually cut. Students and faculty, nearing the end of their semester at host institutions, were shocked to find that university leaders made drastic decisions without their input.

Doctoral programs in economics, English, French, historical preservation, law, political science, sociology, water resources planning management and social work as well as five engineering programs were eliminated.

Cowen assured the Tulane community that experts helped to identify graduate programs most likely to gain national recognition. Those programs would remain and even be enhanced.

“[National experts] suggested that we make all our decisions strategically and focus all future resources in schools and programs that were either nationally prominent or had the potential to be nationally prominent in undergraduate education, research, and graduate education,” Cowen said.

Although Cowen was sure decisions were made with thorough consideration, those most affected by the cuts had different opinions.

English Department Chair Gaurev Desai feels the decision to cut programs was made carelessly. “From what I know, former Graduate Dean Mike Herman was given 48 hours to make the decision for the entire university,” Desai said. “He was away from his office with no data on the worth of each department.”

Desai feels the English Department will suffer a great loss without its doctoral program. “Without a Ph.D. program, our research reputation and faculty recruitment will be severely affected,” Desai said. “We have been compromised seriously."

Desai does see a silver lining and wants to assure the Tulane community of the strength of the English Department.

"Our 4+1 [program] is flourishing, and we will continue to focus on the [master's]," he said.

Sarah Andert, a 4+1 student in English, believes doctoral students who obtained their bachelors from other universities will be greatly missed at Tulane.

"Having fresh minds from other universities adds a different dimension to graduate courses," she said. "They have different approaches to research."

Andert feels master's students benefit from the exposure to doctoral students. "Ph.D. students uphold the integrity of a course. We [master's students] should be exposed to their commitment," she remarked.

The French Department has also experienced the significant loss of their Ph.D. program, while the M.A. is still intact.

French Department Chair Erec Koch feels the university did not execute or communicate these changes in the right way. "I had to discover the loss our doctoral program by reading it online.

There was no direct communication," Koch said. "The proposal for such drastic changes should be assessed by an informed panel, and that did not happen."

Koch feels that cutting the Ph.D. program is a severe loss for the French language and culture of the region. "Our department has always been active, successful and integral to the community in New Orleans and Louisiana," Koch remarked.

Koch also notes how this loss will affect undergraduates. "While we have retained our faculty, the loss of graduate students will affect the number and types of courses we can offer. Many upper-level courses were open to undergraduates and graduates and having both in the classroom was a positive aspect of our program," he said.

Koch would be thrilled to rebuild the doctoral program in upcoming years. "If we are given the opportunity, we would restore the program, which is so important to Tulane, New Orleans and Louisiana," he said. "We are absolutely committed to excellence."

Not every department feels that losing its doctoral program is entirely negative. Associate Dean of Social Work Jane Parker feels that the decision did not compromise the department. "It is an excellent, temporary business decision. If I were Scott Cowen, I would have done the same thing," Parker said.

Parker sees many positive aspects in the changes. "We have retained our M.S.W., which is our flagship program," she said. Parker believes that New Orleans is now one of the best places to study social work. "There are so many networking opportunities post-Katrina. We are working with organizations like UNICEF to get our department good exposure," Parker said.

Perhaps Katrina has strengthened the M.S.W. at Tulane. The motto for the program is now, "Social Work: If you can do it here, you can do it anywhere."

The Tulane community holds a commitment to rebuilding and maintaining the excellence of each department. In channeling their frustrations into a positive look to the future, these students and faculty members are reclaiming their rightful place in the university's renewal plan.

Newcomb College

The Tulane Renewal Plan sparks intense debate over the long-standing tradition of the separation of men and women in education

Following the release of the Renewal Plan after the devastation of Hurricane Katrina, one critical bullet point of the plan instantly became a matter of discussion among students, faculty and alumni alike: the convergence of Newcomb and Tulane College into one, conglomerate college, Newcomb-Tulane College. This idea was met with some apathy on the part of the men and much outrage, anger, and disappointment from the women. Concerns about traditions, endowments and the dream of Josephine Louise Newcomb, Newcomb College's namesake, became an overnight topic of interest.

Dubbed the Newcomb/Tulane Task Force, a group of alumni from both Newcomb and Tulane Colleges led by Chairs Darryl Berger and Linda Wilson was formed in January to hear suggestions on how to best use the hefty endowment left behind by Sophie B. Newcomb following the end of the coordinate college system. Open forums and rallies were held throughout the months of January and February where women expressed their concerns about losing the sense of community and tradition that they value as part of the separate college system. Students were reassured that the combination of Tulane and Newcomb Colleges into one larger organization was not a plan to abolish long-standing traditions.

In March, six alumnae of Newcomb College and nine Newcomb students filed a lawsuit against the administrators of the Tulane Educational Fund in an attempt to prevent the university from dissolving Newcomb and distributing the endowment fund among the university as a whole. The women cited tradition and historical significance as the main reasons to maintain the current university structure. However, on March 31 U.S. District Court Carl Barbier dismissed the lawsuit citing a lack of evidence that Josephine Louise Newcomb intended her money to be used solely for a women's college.

Although the combining of the colleges did force restructuring of the advising system for both Tulane and Newcomb Colleges, as well as the replacement of the Tulane and Newcomb College deans with a single dean for the new Newcomb-Tulane College, academically the combination had few effects. Classes were unaffected and held under the co-educational standard that had been followed prior to the release of the Renewal Plan.

The two colleges remain united despite plans hatched to the contrary, as controversies swirl and debates will continue long into the months to come about the future of Tulane and Newcomb Colleges.

Orientation Deja Vu 34

Step 1: Check In

Step 2: Move Out

"Everyone was trying to act calm and in control, when in fact we weren't. No one knew what to do; no one plans on moving in their freshman year of college and moving right back out," said Nina Handojo.

For freshmen, Aug. 27, 2005 was a day of excitement, anticipation and disappointment. "It was so frustrating because I felt like after all my months of waiting and planning, I had to wait a little longer."

Greeted by welcome banners and colorful orientation signs, cars carrying Tulane freshmen and their belongings packed the University campus.

Freshmen, eager to begin their new lives as college students, found themselves caught up in the whirlwind excitement of move-in day.

"Things were extremely hectic," recalled Morgan Lavan. "Everyone arrived at once it seemed; people had to wait for over an hour for the elevators to get their belongings up to their rooms."

Krista DeLap added, "There were a lot of people helping students move in, mainly football players and orientation coordinators, but some things are hectic by nature. Move-in day is one of those things."

As hectic as things seemed, move-in day was about to become even more interesting...

"The morning of move-in day my mother and I saw a news bulletin about a hurricane approaching the city, and, you know, I told her it was nothing to worry about," recalled Austin Pedal. "Then I started hearing rumors that they were going to evacuate us."

The rumors turned out to be true. At 1 p.m., less than four hours following the arrival of students, President Scott Cowen, in his convocation speech, urged parents to take their children and leave the city.

Although assuming they would be returning in a few days, students were still left disenchanted. Sam Hong stated, "I thought that it was unfair how a new phase of my life was abruptly brought to a halt while students at other universities enjoyed their new lives."

Piles of students' belongings clutter the Monroe Quad. Students at Monroe Hall were instructed to leave their items to be picked up after registration.

Freshmen check in at Sharp Hall. Students had to complete paperwork before receiving room assignments and keys.

Tulane Students Leave New Orleans In the Calm Before the Storm

When the order came to evacuate the city before Hurricane Katrina hit, some students returned home with their parents, while others went along with Tulane's evacuation plan.

About 400 students, nearly all of them freshmen, left New Orleans at 6 p.m. Aug. 18 by coach and by van to Jackson State University. The trip, which usually takes four hours, took almost ten. Along with the freshmen, the football and soccer teams traveled to Jackson, Miss.

Upon arrival, the students took their meager belongings into the gym and chose a piece of floor on which to sleep. They stayed at Jackson State University until Sept. 1, when the hurricane hit Jackson, causing JSU to lose electricity and water. This led to another evacuation. A few students stayed at Jackson to fly out as soon as the airport reopened. Other students took another bus ride. Some went to Southern Methodist University in Houston, while others went to Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

From the two new locations, students had to find a way to get back home, thus ending the fall 2005 semester.

At 10 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 27, 2005, I received a call from a friend who is a resident advisor who informed me that a hurricane was heading for New Orleans and Tulane was evacuating. I left with my pet rabbit, Gus, and clothing for a week heading toward Fort Polk, La. to visit a friend. I merged onto I-10 West at Carrollton. It took me an hour and a half to get to the Clearview exit which normally takes 15 minutes. I got off and started going I-10 East toward home, which is Savannah, Tenn. I spoke with my roommate, Ariel Baverman who was traveling with her pets: two lizards, two rats and three mice, when I was in Hattiesburg, Miss. and she said she was almost there. We decided to meet and stay in a hotel room in Meridian, Miss. that night. We had to secretly get our animals in the room without anyone seeing us and it was not fun! We both got up the next morning and continued to our homes.

-Jessica Austin

I took a taxi to Baton Rouge when we were told to evacuate. We were stuck in traffic for a long time and it took three and a half hours to get to Baton Rouge, a trip that usually only take about an hour. It was a very stressful day, I laid down on my mom's lap and slept for most of the drive. The trip was a total cost of $375. However there was an interesting end to the taxi ride. After that day, I became pretty close friends with the driver and now he calls to check in on me. I even went to his house for a Superbowl party this past February.

- Raven O' Rourke

I arrived for my first semester at Tulane School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine just hours before I had to evacuate because of Katrina. Just long enough to move my belongings into Deming and to take a nap after my long drive from Phoenix, Ariz. I decided that since I had to evacuate I would go on vacation for a few days in Miami... get some sun and then head back to New Orleans for the first day of orientation. I threw some clothes and my iPod into my backpack and headed out. From that point on things got much worse instead of better. At the exact moment that I passed a port-a-potty truck, two came unstrapped and landed on the hood of my new jeep, causing several thousand dollars worth of damage. Once I arrived in Miami, I realized that I would not be returning to New Orleans anytime soon, so I made the long journey through the northern states back to Arizona.

A Few Good Men

President Scott Cowen and a group of faculty and administrators find themselves stranded on campus after the levees break following Hurricane Katrina. The following is taken from a speech by Scott Cowen

On Saturday, Aug. 27, I addressed our incoming first-year students at a special Town Hall meeting held at 1 p.m. in McAlister Auditorium. This was move-in day for our first-year students. In that address, which lasted about 10 minutes, I told the students: "Welcome to Tulane University. Now, I'd like you to leave your belongings in your dorm rooms and leave town." Twenty-four hours earlier, Hurricane Katrina was in the Gulf of Mexico and headed for the Florida Panhandle. By that Saturday morning, the storm's path had shifted westward and was headed straight for New Orleans as a powerful Category 4 hurricane.

Of those 1,650 first-year students and their parents, all but about 600 were able to leave under their own steam. We sent the remaining students to the campus of Jackson State University in Jackson, Miss., where they were given shelter until the storm passed.

On Sunday, with the students safe, I gathered with four of my senior administrators in the Reily Student Recreation Center to ride out the storm with air mattresses, a little food and two days worth of clothing. There were also 25 facilities workers in key buildings on our uptown campus, and about 200 in our downtown health sciences center.

Hurricane Katrina arrived about 5 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 29, and took 12 hours to blow through, leaving behind mountains of debris, including broken tree limbs, upside-down cars, downed trees, blown-out windows, destroyed roofs and water damage all over New Orleans.

Then the levees broke. Even though Katrina had not hit the city directly, its storm surge had swollen Lake Pontchartrain and the Industrial Canal, which sit to New Orleans' north and east, and the pressure caused four levee failures in various parts of the city, most of which lies below sea level. New Orleans lost power early on, but thanks to our generators we had some power on campus. We also had water, sewer and working land-line phones. We settled in for another night on campus, believing the water that was flooding neighborhoods in New Orleans East, Lakeview and the Ninth Ward would not reach us.

By Tuesday evening, however, water was everywhere, turning the Reily Center into a virtual island. Fortunately, the day before the storm, we had found a couple of canoes underneath the Reily center; now, they were our only means of transportation. Our generators had been deluged and we were without power; the city's water supply was now compromised and we had no sewer services. No phones were working. We weren't sure what to do, and I was concerned about our people downtown at our health sciences center and in Tulane hospital. Then I heard a "ping" from my cell phone; I had a text message. I had never used text messaging, didn't know how to use it, and still am unsure why it worked when nothing else did. But it was a message from my daughter in New York, and soon text messaging became our link to the outside world.

There was now no way out of the flooded city, and for the next two days we sat in eerie silence, surrounded by water. Our facilities personnel had joined us at the recreational center, bringing our population to 30. We slept anywhere there was air moving in the stifling heat. I joined a few of our facilities staff members in a canoe to paddle around the campus looking for food and water. In addition to finding food, we also siphoned gas out of parked cars to power a motorboat we had found. I learned a whole new set of skills during this time!

Meanwhile, other members of the Tulane administration were gathering in Houston, and they had made arrangements for a helicopter to rescue us. The first attempt failed when the helicopter was unable to find us. Finally, we were told the helicopter could pick us up at a riverside park a mile or so from campus. Getting there was an experience I'll never forget. First, we took a boat to the edge of the flooded area. Then, we hot-wired a golf cart to take us to the nearest main thoroughfare, where an abandoned dump truck was commandeered to drive us to the helicopter pickup. As I sat in the helicopter flying out over the inundated city, I did not know if Tulane--or New Orleans--would survive.

In the aftermath of the hurricane, Tulane students found themselves with a lot of questions. For many the first question that came to mind was not, "What will happen to me?", but "How can I help?" Many students found at the same time that the national media was suddenly interested in how they were coping. The following headlines show that Tulane students rose to the occasion to help each other and New Orleans to recover.

NEW ORLEANS BRACES FOR THE BIG ONE

Before Hurricane Katrina, New Orleans was famous for its music, food, and nightlife. Since August of 2005 Hurricane Katrina has overshadowed everything else about the city in the national and international press. At first, New Orleanians stranded far from their homes waited eagerly for each piece of news. Even as the flood waters rose and residents were ordered out of the city, journalists swarmed in. Their reports were watched and read by a world in shock at the devastation. As more and more people return to New Orleans, stories of loss were slowly replaced by news of recovery. Here is a sample of the headlines that told the story of the storm.

How to make an American Quilt

No Tulane student spent the 2005 fall semester where they originally planned, but the warm reception they received from the more than 500 different universities they attended instead—at least one in every state—helped ease the sadness of leaving NOLA and Tulane behind. After Katrina, Tulane commissioned local artist and Tulane graduate Gina Phillips to make a quilt containing the logos of many of the schools attended by Tulanians. Below is a partial list of some of the schools.

Artist Gina Phillips was born in Madison County, Ky. in a house that lacked running water, but with a family gifted with mechanical, musical and artistic ability.

Phillips graduated from the University of Kentucky with a Bachelor of Fine Arts in painting in 1994. A year later, Phillips moved to New Orleans to pursue an M.F.A. from Tulane University which she completed in 1997.

During this time, she began focusing on fabric as her medium of choice, first painting onto printed fabric, then making pieces solely out of fabric and thread.

The quilt hanging in the Lavin-Bernick Center's faculty and staff dining room is an all thread and fabric creation by Phillips. It was commissioned by Student Affairs to commemorate the institutions that hosted Tulane students during the evacuation. The schools were asked to send a few items with their logo on it which Phillips sewed into the tapestry. From concept to completion, the project took a year.

Executive Director of the Center for Educational Resources and Counseling Jillandra Rovaris led the project "to give thanks and homage to the generosity of the universities that welcomed Tulane's dispersed student body after Hurricane Katrina. The other message was to the students: that we survived, that we endured and that we're coming back and we're coming back strong," Rovaris said.

Phillips knows the disorientation caused by Katrina first hand. She bought a house in the Lower Ninth Ward in 2004 and spent a year turning it into a studio and home. A week after the work was completed, Katrina struck. Phillips lived in Richmond, Va. for 10 months after the storm, but is back in town now, living in a FEMA trailer and repairing her house.

What they loved . . .

"[Texas A&M] welcomed us with an orientation for all displaced students, gave us bedding and toiletries, and set up a room for us to register for housing, classes and a meal plan."

Sola Cardoso, Houston
attended Texas A&M

"On an individual level ... all the professors were extremely interested in asking questions and expressing their sympathies."

Drew Dickson, Memphis, Tenn.
sophomore: Political Science, Economics & History
attended University of Memphis

"SCU was very accommodating. The Dean of the Business school introduced himself and everyone was so friendly. The campus is gorgeous and sunny. Their cafeteria has really great fresh, healthy foods."

Amy Goldfine, Marin County, Calif.
MBA: Information Systems & Management
attended Santa Clara University, Leavey School of Business

"[Boston University] had a few dinners for us to welcome and get us oriented and offered to help us with things like house supplies. The students actually banded together and had a webpage entry with information on finding housing and offered to take us around the city and school."

Whitney Johnson, Los Angeles
attended Boston University

"The whole staff and faculty were extremely accomodating in my situation, as I had already missed the orientations to the program and the city of Rome (about two-weeks worth of material). They all just were so happy to have me and accomodate me in such a stressful and emotional time, it made the time so much better."

Dylan Rogers, Norfolk, Va.
sophomore: Classical Studies & Italian
attended Duke's Intercollegiate Center for Classical Studies in Rome, Italy

"I very much liked the academic atmosphere; not much like Tulane because all students were much more focused on their school work than on having fun."

Lauren Ruth, Wheaton, Ill.
attended University of Chicago

"RPI — as an institution — was great to us; one of the sororities even held a clothing/household goods/warm clothes drive for evacuees who came up with less than I had. Everyone in admissions and the FYE (first-year experience) office was really wonderful, the professors were all understanding, even as I got there three weeks into the semester."

Kate Schimmer, Lindenhurst, N.Y.
freshman: Biomedical Engineering attended Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

What they missed . . .

"I missed the diversity at Tulane and the various cultures of New Orleans."

Sala Cardoso, Houston
attended Texas A&M

"It didn't take long for me to realize I missed Tulane's people. There is a diversity of both background and views here; no other school can match that. You can say many things about Tulane and New Orleans, but they are by no means ordinary."

Drew Dickson, Memphis, Tenn.
sophomore: Political Science, Economics & History
attended University of Memphis

"I really missed Freeman's facilities. Leavey didn't have wireless in the building, and the classrooms were old and cramped. The business school building didn't have any central or common areas to facilitate socializing. Between classes everyone just stood in the hall."

Amy Goldfine, Marin County, Calif.
MBA; Information Systems & Management
attended Santa Clara University, Leavey School of Business

"New Orleanians are some of the most interesting and fascinating people in America and the world. The first thing I thought about when the levees broke was, 'How are the ladies at Bruff right now? Did they get out of the cities with their families? Are they safe?' and luckily a great majority returned that January."

Dylan Rogers, Norfolk, Va.
sophomore: Classical Studies & Italian

"I missed my Tulane friends, the sunshine, having class outside."

Lauren Ruth, Wheaton, Ill.
attended University of Chicago

"I LOVED working on Capitol Hill. I learned so much and got to live in the nation's capital! It was thrilling! But I missed everything about New Orleans. While I was so lucky to spend my semester in Washington, DC, I couldn't wait to get home to New Orleans and Tulane."

Laura Scaglione, Melbourne, Fla.
interned for Louisiana Representative Bobby Jindal in Washington D.C.

"People weren't as friendly there — much less likely to strike up random conversations in the dining hall or during class. I never really felt like I fit at RPI — I made friends and sat with people during class — but I was never really happy to be there like I was in N.O. during NOLA [pre-orientation program]. It just wasn't Tulane — the place I had been excited to go to since my acceptance letter came the December before."

Renew Rebuild Rebirth

New Orleans returns with a vibrance and vigor unique to the Crescent City

In the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, New Orleanians and Tulanians alike rushed back to assess the damage to their homes, businesses and lives. Some were lucky, but others faced total destruction of their property and loss of their loved ones.

In the months that followed, construction workers poured into the city and began the task of repairing all that the floodwaters had destroyed. Every day a new business re-opened and families returned to their life-long homes.

The pictures on the following pages tell stories of loss and sorrow but they also capture the hope and spirit that breathes live back into the city of New Orleans.

Seeing Double

It took me three days of constant unpacking to get everything situated within my dorm room exactly how I wanted it. I arrived Wednesday, Aug. 26 and in between Orientation Coordinator training sessions, I diligently removed things from storage, unpacked countless boxes, and spent hours perfectly placing every item. Finally, Saturday, Aug. 29 rolled around and it was time to meet my freshmen and help them in their struggle to accept that the tiny room has to be shared between two people and the bathroom is down the hall.

At about 8 a.m., the first eager parents arrived and we began unloading their car and trudging up numerous flights of stairs with their seemingly endless belongings. It was not until 10 o'clock that I was even aware that there was a hurricane headed toward the Gulf. It started out as a mere whispered rumor passed around between the orientation staff and a few of the parents who routinely watched the morning news. Finally, Katrina became an official announcement. Parents were told not to panic and that President Cowen would be holding a special meeting to address all concerns and to give the parents and new students evacuation information.

I spent about an hour reassuring parents that an actual hurricane hitting the city was very unlikely and that it was unnecessary to re-pack all of their child's belongings, something I naively believed at the time. My roommate and I decided to leave as soon as possible. Packing enough clothing for about a week, our computers, and a few things we deemed completely irreplaceable should something actually happen, we quickly loaded ourselves into the car.

The traffic on I-10 was not completely unreasonable and it only took us about an hour to get out of the city and on our way up to Memphis, my hometown. We spent the next few days watching the news in agony until President Cowen finally decided to close the university for the semester; I resigned myself to a semester in Tennessee with my parents.

After a five month blur, I arrived back in New Orleans in January to once again meet and greet the freshmen in an event aptly named Orientation Déjà Vu. Seeing everyone for the first time and catching up on where everyone had been and what they had done was an exhilarating experience. I was a little surprised to learn that so many new students had decided not to return to Tulane.

Personally, I cannot imagine spending another semester away from Tulane!

TUCP took several months to plan the Welcome Back show. Scott Rowley (president), Ryan Griffin (concerts chair), David Lipps (VP of programming), Alex Miller (adviser) and Trevor Jones (recreation chair) all had a hand in planning the concert along with a committee of 50 undergraduate and graduate students.

The party was a huge success. More than 3,000 students came to the show which featured student, local, regional and national artists. Even though heavy rain plagued attendance, the concert was a great way to welcome back Tulane.

Aside from the rain, the event was well organized, and had a method to its madness. Expo had a different layout than in years past, and appeared to be received well by students. We had over 500 students take part in the event, and over 150 student organizations were represented.

Alex Miller, Director of Campus Programs and Special Projects

The Welcome Back....that Almost Wasn't

Rain almost put a damper on the rescheduled Activities Expo and Welcome Back Concert

Activities Expo was originally planned for the first weekend in September, but due to Hurricane Katrina, it was on Newcomb Quad Jan. 30, 2006.

Instead of the usual set-up, the tables at the Expo were arranged by organization type. There were 150 organizations at the Expo this year, representing groups from the following areas: club sports, service and education, liberal arts and pre-professional, programming and performance, student government, Greek, multicultural, religious, media, political, honors, departmental and military.

Student Programs warned the campus organizations that there was a 90 percent chance of rain for that Friday, and about 30 minutes after the start of the Expo, it started to pour.

Quiz Bowl was the only group to stay until the end of the scheduled event.

That evening, the Welcome Back concert was held outside opposite McAlister Auditorium featuring Juvenile and several local Tulane student bands. Despite the rain the turn out was huge.

Who is Rebirth?

Rebirth Brass Band is a New Orleans staple. Simply put, The ReBirth Brass Band is an institution; formed in 1983, the band has long since graduated from the streets of New Orleans to theaters and festivals all over the world. ReBirth is committed to upholding the tradition of brass bands while at the same time incorporating modern music into their show. Their signature brand of heavy funk has placed them among the world's top brass bands.

Working with Common Ground Relief, a group of students helps remove belongs from houses in the devastated Ninth Ward, soon to be gutted and leveled by demolition crews. Due to safety concerns, students were required to don full body suits, masks and gloves while volunteering with the organization. The organization's goal is to provide hope and support to the communities they feel need immediate assistance to rebuild their lives.

Spreading cement for the foundation, students lay the groundwork for one of several houses that Habitat for Humanity is building in St. Bernard Parish. Habitat for Humanity, faced with a overflowing supply of volunteers following the hurricane, has a goal to build one house in the parish per month and is well on its way to providing sustainable housing for low-income families.

2006 Outreach New Orleans

Interview with Hamilton Simons-Jones, Director of Community Services Coordination

How did you obtain your position within CACTUS and could you briefly detail what your position entails?

I am the Director of Community Services Coordination. Through this position, I advise student organizations, including SOAR, CACTUS, Meditation Club, Green Club, Circle K, Stand for Children, and Tulane Alternative Breaks.

I serve as a liaison for the university to community organizations, non-profit entities and schools, to coordinate community service and volunteer opportunities primarily for students.

In addition, we have started coordinating out-of-town groups, mainly other universities, who want to spend their breaks doing service work in New Orleans.

What was the general goal of Outreach New Orleans? To have 3,000 people from Dillard, Loyola, Tulane and Xavier join together for a day of meaningful service. This day would be an introduction to community service that would encourage people to make more long-lasting commitments to community service during their time here and beyond.

Approximately how many people participated in Outreach New Orleans? Did this meet or exceed your standards?

3,000 people. It met and exceeded my standards. It was truly beautiful to see the turnout. It may have been the single largest university day of community service in New Orleans' history. It is what I have been working for since I got to New Orleans in 1997.

How were the sites/ organizations for Outreach New Orleans chosen?

They were based on several factors: places we have existing partnerships with; need; variety of service activities, ability to supervise volunteers that day.

Preparing to put up siding, students begin building the framework of a house in the St. Bernard Parish with the help of Habitat for Humanity. Working with this organization is by far one of the most popular volunteer opportunities that students ask for through their club. Many Tulane clubs and organizations spend years trying to get reservations for their groups to participate in their work.

moving on UTP

As a freshman, living in Wall Residential College was one of the best choices that I made. At first coming to a new university was frightening, but Wall made it easy to get involved and learn more about the campus events and organizations through various committees and events that were held. Wall also provided a very social atmosphere, which helped me to meet several new friends. Not to mention who wouldn't want to live in a brand new dorm?!

Wall Residential College was probably the most amazing dorm on campus, but it's not only about how nice the building is; it was the heart and soul of the students that lived here. We all had to apply, and we were all involved not only in different committees in the dorm, but all over campus. The people that lived here all had so much in common. I have made great friends that know how to have fun, but also know how to balance that with school work and other extracurricular activities. The building was like a palace compared to their dorms, but my favorite part of living here was the people.

Everyone was really close and together, we were all involved in something within the dorm, whether it was being committee chairpersons or officers. We did community service together also. It was such a diverse group of people from all over and everyone had their own uniqueness. Plus, it was really nice and new. I mean, before the hurricane and everything, I was unwrapping a BRAND NEW MATTRESS. Now, how many college kids get to do that? I love it!

In terms of washing machines (they work), elevator flooring (they're carpeted), and room size (BIG), Wall Residential College was a definite upgrade from the accommodations and amenities of my freshman year, akin to say, maybe a move from the inner-city to the suburbs. But really, what Butler House lacked in luxury, it made up a hundred-million-fold with love. Butler was home. I missed having a roommate. Now I just have my own sink. I guess it was a trade-off.

Located on the site of the old Zemurray Residence Hall, the new Residential College, Lallage Feazel Wall, was scheduled to open its doors in Fall 2005. However, due to Hurricane Katrina it opened in Spring 2006.

The Residential College is unique among Tulane's residential facilities because in addition to housing approximately 250 undergraduates residents, it also can provide a home for a faculty member and his or her family. This faculty member is called the Professor in Residence and will help the college residents engage more fully with the intellectual and social activities at the university.

The residents of Wall will be active participants in the Residential College and have opportunities for leadership, self-governance and intellectual engagement and leadership development with a mix of faculty, staff and students outside of the classroom. Students spend approximately 80% of their academic experience outside the classroom.

Tulane's residential college offers the opportunity for students to participate in unique programs that integrate the academic life into residential. The Professor in Residence's project will provide a bridge between the formal academic programs at Tulane University and the out-of-classroom learning experience. The establishment of this new residential model will help facilitate faculty-student interaction, create a greater sense of community, promote intellectual discovery and enhance opportunities for leadership and student self-governance.

Each student selected to live in the Wall Residential College was selected because of the contribution that Tulane University feels he or she will make to the community, and as such it is very important that every person be an active participant. There are nine student committees in the Wall Residential College: Hall Government, Community Standards Board, Traditions and Major Events, Community Service, Cultural Enrichment, Social Programs, Website Management, Academic Enrichment and Wellness. Each resident will be asked to be a part of at least one of these committees.

The Wall Residential College community has the potential to be one of promise and distinction for Tulane.

Throws

Throws are anything that gets thrown into the crowd by riders in the parades. Each krewe has its own distinctive throws but all of them throw beads. Other throws include stuffed toys, doubloons and Zulu coconuts.

History

The tradition of Mardi Gras is older than the city of New Orleans itself. French settlers brought the holiday here when they founded their settlement. Mardi Gras has been celebrated in Louisiana since at least 1699. In 1857, Comus was the first krewe to hold a parade during Mardi Gras. Carnival season starts on Twelfth Night, a Christian holiday on January 5 and ends with a huge celebration on Mardi Gras. This huge party is a way to indulge before the somberness of Lent.

Krewes

Krewes are the organizations that put on parades. Members pay dues to pay for the floats and for the privilege of riding in the parade. Krewes also sponsor balls and parties during carnival season. Some krewes give money to charity or volunteer their time to help the community.

Mardi Gras

Traditions

The three colors of Mardi Gras are purple, gold, and green. Purple stands for justice, gold for power, and green for faith. These colors show up on flags and clothing all through Carnival season.

King cake is a type of cake that is only eaten during Carnival. The traditional king cake has cinnamon filling and is covered with purple, gold and green icing. The king cake is named for the clay or plastic figure of a baby that is baked into each one. This figure represents the baby Jesus. Tradition says that the person who finds the baby in their piece of cake has to buy the next king cake.

Do you know what it means to miss Mardi Gras?

Mardi Gras 2006 came not six months after Hurricane Katrina devastated New Orleans. Many people were worried that the city would not be able to hold the usual celebrations. Others felt that the money and time normally spent on Mardi Gras should be diverted to community service. Most krewes decided to hold their parades in order to uphold the spirit of the city. Parade routes were shorter and fewer parades ran than in years past. Hurricane Katrina is not the first event to curtail Mardi Gras celebrations. During the Civil War, both World Wars, and the Korean War, there were years when all parades had to be canceled. In 1979 a strike by the New Orleans police force forced parades to move to surrounding parishes.

2006 Mardi Gras Parade Schedule

Returned New Orleanians scheduled a comeback for the beloved city. Although there were fewer routes and fewer parades than in years past, the 150th anniversary of Carnival in New Orleans may have been the most important in its history. Here is how they rolled. . .

Reactions to Mardi Gras

Despite the shorter parades, Tulane students turned out in droves to see floats, collect beads, and enjoy the revelry. They were enthusiastic about the fact that nothing important was missing from this year's celebrations. There was a controversy over whether Mardi Gras should have even happened this year, but afterwards, Tulane students all agreed that they enjoyed themselves. Not even the aftermath of the worst hurricane in recent memory could dampen the spirit of Mardi Gras.

I still really enjoyed it. There were fewer stupid tourists getting drunk. Fewer people bothered to come so there was less drunkenness and drugs around.

-Benjamin Curole

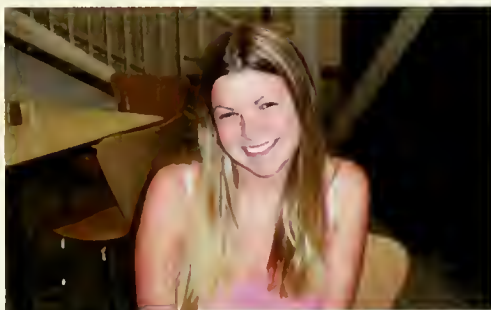

There wasn't as much hubbub. Since the population is down, it was more laidback.

-Jessica Prusa

It was more of a community event. There was more spirit than usual. Going down to the French Quarter, you could tell people put a lot effort into their costumes. It seemed like they were trying to move on from the hurricane.

-Reddington Jahncke

It was smaller but the spirit was still there.

-Sarah Williams

It was tight. It was different but I think it was even better than usual.

Mardi Gras...

Hurricane Katrina affected the tourist crowds at Mardi Gras 2006 with a population count of approximately 450,000, according to the amount of trash left on the streets. The participation of the locals and college students however, was as strong as ever as Tulane students emptied campus and swarmed towards the parade routes. Many students continued the tradition of staying up all night on the Monday night before Fat Tuesday (Lundi Gras) and attending the famous Zulu parade the next morning at 8 a.m. Despite tragedy, Mardi Gras will continue to exemplify the spirit and spunk of New Orleans and Tulane.

Tulane Alternative Breaks was started in 2004 by Wesley Jeffers and Trisha Schimek as a way for students to volunteer their time during Spring Break. TAB had several trips to areas in need during the break, but Hurricane Katrina prevented the group from travelling this year. Instead, students chose to remain in New Orleans with over 500 students from other universities across the nation, helping local organizations with rebuilding efforts. The group sorted donations, painted schools and gutted houses in the areas affected most by the hurricane. The group also planned educational and social activities to teach students about New Orleans, its culture and the issues caused by the hurricane to raise understanding and awareness of the struggles following the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina.

“For those of you unfamiliar with Tulane University and New Orleans, let me just tell you that they are a state of mind and a state of the heart.”

TIDAL WAVE

Though the traditional fall Homecoming celebration was not possible this year, Tulane simply rescheduled. The weekend was built around a baseball game instead of a football game this year but all of the usual activities went on. Students could be seen enjoying free snoballs on the step of McAlister Auditorium, painting windows of dorms and Bruff Commons, and cheering on the Green Wave athletics' teams.

Parents could be seen cheering right along with their children since Parent's Weekend was also rescheduled to coincide with the Homecoming celebrations.

Although the Tulane baseball suffered a disheartening defeat to Rice University in the last three innings of the match, Tulane spirits were high at finally being able to celebrate in true Crescent City style.

MAPLE STREET AND BEYOND

Students go beyond Maple Street to discover gems of city nightlife beyond campus

Princeton Review ranks Tulane as:

No. 18 - Lots of Beer

No. 1 - Lots of Hard Liquor

No. 11 - Party Schools

With so many bars to choose from, no wonder Tulane ranks as the No. 11 party school in the country. Much of the partying takes place at the popular hangout—even after Hurricane Katrina—Maple Street. Almost every night of the week you can see Tulane students at Vera Cruz, Bruno's, TJ Quills, Phillip's Bar and Madigans. With a drink special every night of the week, students can always find an excuse to go out and relax after a day of class. Maple Street continues to grow as the construction of the new Bruno's across the street was barely affected by the disaster in the fall semester.

Sitting across Maple Street from another popular hangout T.J. Quill's, Bruno's is a casual bar where many students find conversation, pool and darts, and an outdoor seating area.

The Bulldog, a bar farther afield on Magazine Street, is popular on Wednesday nights when it gives away collectable beer glasses.

Another bar located on Magazine Street, Ms. Mae's, pulls a large crowd from Tulane. Because of the distance from campus, crowds tend to be smaller and more upperclassmen, which is preferable to some students.

Located on Magazine Street, Le Bon Temps Roule bar and sandwich shop is a great place to stop and grab a bite to eat long into the night.

F and M's, a cheaper and simpler bar, attracts a large Greek crowd because the management chooses to rent out its rooms to hold parties for less than other bars in the area.

Tropical Isle, a classic daiquiri shop sits on a corner of Bourbon Street. The bar sells local favorites such as daiquiris, hurricanes and hand grenades.

The House of Blues is a popular spot for bands to play a smaller venue. Often sold out, the shows are uniquely advertised on a chalkboard in a window front and the bar itself is disguised as a common alleyway.

Where is everybody?

Bourbon Street population dwindles...

Usually one of the busiest places in New Orleans, Bourbon Street's typically wild and noisy composure has sobered since Hurricane Katrina. Tourists continue to flock to this one-of-a-kind street in order to see its unique phenomenon of people letting loose upon their first steps onto Bourbon. Pre-Katrina, every night of the week was hopping with tourists and locals alike enjoying the festivities on their favorite New Orleans street. Although the crowd has quieted for now, much like the high-heeled mechanical legs from the window at Big Daddy's Gentleman's Club, Bourbon Street will keep on swinging.

How to find a House in 10 Days

Panhellenic Recruitment 2006

The theme for this year's Panhellenic recruitment was "How to find a House in 10 Days", based off the hit movie "How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days" with Matthew McCaughney and Kate Hudson. 377 girls rushed this year to find a spot in one of the six houses starting Feb. 9 and culminating with Bid Day Sunday, Feb. 19, 2006.

Fraternity Recruitment

Tulane University's Greek life is unique in that it participates in deferred recruitment, meaning that entering first-time semester freshmen may not join Tulane fraternities and sororities until they have completed at least 12 hours of coursework. Each spring, hundreds of men vie for a coveted position as a member of one of Tulane's ten fraternities.

Greek Programs are committed to supporting the valuable learning experience that the community offers, including promoting the intellectual, social, recreational and moral development of students, as well as providing training in leadership skills and other personal and social skills. In addition, Greek organizations on the Tulane campus wish to promote an ever-increasing appreciation for diversity.

With over 30 percent of the Tulane community actively involved in Greek life, this year's recruitment was no less busy than normal, resulting in a successfully gathered group of young men and women to lead their organizations into the future.

ΑΕPhi has become much more community-oriented since Hurricane Katrina. We created an entire committee dedicated to community service. Before Katrina, the sorority focused its philanthropy efforts on our two national charities: The Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation and the Chaim Sheba Medical Center in Israel. Since the hurricane, however, we have been putting all our efforts towards rebuilding New Orleans. We have organized and participated in many events including Katrina Krewe, Beautify Broadway and gutting a home in the area. Our most successful event was with Chabad. We went into a home of a Jewish family in the area and gutted it. It was amazing to see what 60-plus women can do when they get together for a good cause. ΑΕPhi has made a conscious effort since Katrina to help rebuild New Orleans and we plan on doing so in the coming years.

Alpha Epsilon Pi worked quickly to recover from Hurricane Katrina. Our house at 1001 Broadway sustained minimal damage and was in good condition by mid-October. While many brothers were unable to return for the Spring 2006 semester, almost every member will return for the Fall 2006 semester. We are looking forward to contributing to the rebuilding of New Orleans and working with the people of Tulane University.

Our philanthropy is education. After Hurricane Katrina, the problems of New Orleans, educational system included, were laid bare for all to see. It reminded us that our dedication to the philanthropy could help the city in its long term recovery plans. We are honored and excited to be part of the renewal, and hope to hear the sounds of children laughing at school playgrounds again soon.

Kappa Kappa Gamma has been a steady rock in my life throughout the entire Katrina ordeal. When we were all separated at different schools, in different parts of the world, it was amazing to see how close we all stayed. Having such a feeling of togetherness, even if it was via e-mail, always brightened my day and reminded me that 100 other girls were sharing my same hopes and fears. Within my chapter and throughout the entire Greek community there is a newly found sense of camaraderie. We have been doing more philanthropies and service projects than ever before and we live to "seize the day," every day. We all love it here! Katrina might have taken all our physical belongings, but most importantly she did not take away our love for New Orleans, Tulane and the Greek community.

The four cornerstones of Kappa Sigma are:

1. Fellowship — over 230,000 men have joined the National Chapter, enjoying the unmatched experiences, involvement and lifelong Brotherhood
2. Leadership — Brothers learn to get involved in their communities on a local and national level
3. Scholarship — the importance of education is never forgotten as a Brother; and
4. Service — Brothers spend thousands hours of working in their communities and raising money for worthy causes.

We lost two good guys that decided not to return to Tulane, but overall we have benefited from Hurricane Katrina. As most of our brothers returned from other schools they realized what they had been missing out on. The overall excitement and involvement in Fiji by all the brothers has increased greatly and I feel that being away for a semester has brought us all closer and strengthened the brotherhood of Phi Gamma Delta at Tulane.

I think that the events of the fall have affected each chapter and chapter member differently. We gained a lot of perspective being away, and our members came back to Tulane appreciative of the chapters throughout the country that took our members in, and anxious to utilize good ideas they gathered from those chapters. We have all worked to do more service projects, especially directly in the community, which have given our members a lot strong ties to the city we are all proud and excited to return home to.

Having a sense of sisterhood with us gave us comfort and something to lean on. Upon our return to Tulane, there was an overwhelming feeling of excitement to be with each other again. We were all finally back in our element, back at Tulane, and most importantly back with each other.

The Sigma Phi Epsilon was the first fraternity to charter a chapter in all 50 states as well as the first fraternity to establish a housing trust for all chapters and create a National Housing Corporation. Over the past 20 years, SigEp has recruited more men than any other collegiate fraternity on the national level. With over 14,000 undergraduate members, the fraternity stands as the largest national fraternity overall — its 225,000 lifetime members rank Sigma Phi Epsilon in the top four among national fraternities.

Although not officially recognized through Tulane University, Zeta Psi has been a social college fraternity since 1847. They were the first fraternity to stretch from coast-to-coast and the first international fraternity. The Fraternity's goal is to "...turn out into the world self-respecting, original-thinking, self-controlled, purposeful gentlemen."

This year, Tulane fans came out in full force. Following Hurricane Katrina, students, faculty, alumni, and supporters of Tulane showed their support for Tulane Athletics. During fall semester fans from areas where the team was playing would come out and show their spirit. When spring semester started and the games were more accessible to students, the crowds filled the stands to prove that through changes there can be triumph!

Now back in New Orleans, more students turn out for games and show their spirit at the Men's Basketball game versus Memphis University at Fogelman Arena.

FIGHT SONG!

Green Wave, Green Wave, hats off to thee Fight, fight, fight for our victory
Shout to the skies our Green Wave war cries
The bravest we'll defy!
Hold that line
for Olive and Blue,
We will cheer for you,
So Fight! Fight!
Old Tulane fight on for victory...

Trey Martin winds up the pitch during practice. Varying the style and types of balls thrown without predictability was a learned skill of the Tulane players.

Holding a strange pose after the ball is thrown, the pitcher waits to see where his ball will end up. Baseballs often changed direction in the air depending on angle of pitch, grip on the ball, and weather conditions.

The batter waits to swing on the ball until it sits in the perfect position. Sometimes it was more advantageous to take a ball than get a strike with a wasted attempt at an inferior pitch.

The biggest change would have to be the budget cuts and trying to maintain normal operations using other funds such as dues, etc. We were able to successfully enter two of our members in a local competition despite Katrina.
~Alisha Reaves

Our hardest problem after Hurricane Katrina was recruiting members. However, we recruited a lot of new members and had a lot of returning members. We even were able to compete this year and two of our members won first place in their Tango category (Jessie Ippolito and Andrey Skripnikov).

It was difficult for us to get new members in the club after the storm. We were able to advertise our club in the dorms, and that was a big help
for us.

Dodgeball

Directly before Hurricane Katrina,
the Tulane Dodgeball Club had its first change in president since it was originally formed three years before.

The new president was nothing compared to the founder and one true leader of the Dodgeball Club, who shall only be known as "the" Chuck Taylor. I can't wait until Chuck is back next year even if he is only going to be a common member instead of President.

Only then shall the prophecy come true to
DOOM!!!

 fared pretty well.
 We lost a substantial amount of gear but, because of members having their own gear and some of the club's stuff that was stored at a house above the water line, we could function.

We went on three trips last semester.
 We went to Sloper Jam at Horse Pens 40 and a trip to Sandrocks, both in Alabama.

We also went to Foster Falls in Tennessee.

I don't think we lost any players due to the hurricane, but it did cut out a semester of practice for us. We missed tournaments and matches and a big recruiting opportunity.

Running Club

Like many clubs, the runner's club was up and running for the spring of 2006, but with limited numbers.

Katrina whipped out a lot of the city and with it went the organizers for many of our typical, and most favorite races.

However, we still were able to post runners for the Mardi Gras Marathon festivities (5k and half-marathon runners), the Run Through History in Metairie, and the Crescent City Classic.

The most challenging thing that we had to deal with was the lack of practice space.

Because the field behind Reily was "contaminated",
 we couldn't practice there.

Practicing during the day was difficult because many people had class or stuff to do.

Our major challenge was to rebuild the team, starting from the ground up. Our entire facility and all equipment was destroyed so it's amazing that we were able to make it back out on the water in the spring. Our team overcame this hurdle and was able to host two district events, including the SEISA spring championship.

~Tripp Burd

Women's Soccer

The hurricane most affected our team by the destruction of all of the playable fields. It was really a struggle to get our team going this semester because we really did not have great practice space or times.

Also, our stronger season is in the fall, and we missed it.

I am confident though that next semester everything will be back to normal, if not better.

Standing off to the sidelines, Grace Gerald, Kathleen Cardinale, and her teammates goof around while taking a water break. Club sports were so popular this year because of their focus on social interaction in addition to mere competitive drive within one sport.

Sitting out of the game, Sophie Healy ices her knee. Injuries during play were not uncommon, but proper first aid and medical attention prevented serious problems from arising at matches.

The Swimming Club poses for a group shot outside of the swimming pool at the 2006 East Coast Championships. Despite having lacked a swimming pool on Tulane's campus all spring semester due to Hurricane Katrina, the club was able to successfully prepare by using Loyola University's pool to practice.

I felt the biggest change to club sports was trying to get everyone involved like they were in the past. Attendance was low for Tennis during the year, but I feel the people who did show did a great job of making the best out of a bad situation.

With most of the Division I sports being canceled, including tennis, it put a real damper on the mood of most of the athletes on campus.

The ones with real devotion to their respective club sports really did a good job to support their team.

I am hoping for another great year for Club Tennis as well as all the other club sports for the upcoming semesters.

We did not have a large team due to the hurricane. It was extremely hard to recruit new players, especially when the Activities Expo got rained out.

Instead we tried to recruit by posting up flyers about Lagniappe practices and by getting our friends to join.

One of the main events at the Wave Goodbye party is free food and lots of it—with local New Orleans favorites like pulled pork to snoballs.

Even children are entertained at the party with clowns and face painting at a children's booth just for their amusement while the parents meet their children's friends.

Graduates and their proud parents mill around into the early hours of the night celebrating their achievements.

Charmaine Neville sings to a crowd of hundreds of parents and students on the Gibson Quad.

Do You Know What It Means?

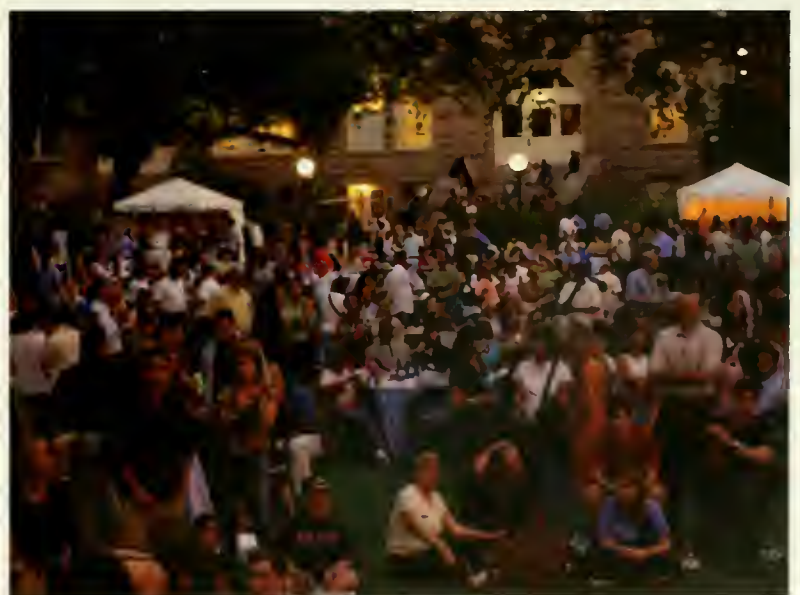

Tulane's Wave Goodbye party helps graduates let go of college life and move on to their future successes

On the Friday afternoon before Commencement, the Wave Goodbye party was held on the academic quad on Tulane's uptown campus. Parents, family members and students gathered to share their memories of their time at Tulane and prepare for their momentous walk across the stage the next morning.

Charmaine Neville and her band perform on a specially-crafted stage in the academic quad during the Wave Goodbye party. Local New Orleans jazz seemed the perfect send-off for the class that overcame all odds to reach graduation day.

The fields were covered with blue tents, under each a different culinary treat—something to remember New Orleans by. Along with the seemingly endless food, the party was marked by Charmaine Neville and her band serenading the crowd with her tunes long into the evening.

The party began to dwindle as parents and students returned home to sleep and prepare for the walk into their future the following morning.

A special banner stands at the front of the quad where security took tickets for the event, preventing any unexpected guests from attending.

Guests sit and stand across Gibson quad as the sun sets, listening to Charmaine Neville's serenades.

Edward Morse, the University Marshal, leads the procession of graduates followed by the traditional bagpipe players.

Tulane graduates a famous senior class despite struggles after the storm

It's Our Home, Louisiana

Words and Music by Jep Epstein

The fire bright
The lights are on again
Graceful trees tell quiet tales
And you remember them
All our dreams and hope are shared
Smiles bring other smiles Neighbors, friends and family join together we survive
This is our love,
This is our life,
This is our home, Louisiana.
This is our day.
Come what may; this is our home.

A breaking dawn; a tender morn;
A canvas we design.
A band parades; a jester laughs.
We share momentous time.
All our hopes flow back to you;

Jep Epstein performs his original song "It's Our Home, Louisiana" as a tribute to the trials and tribulations of the Gulf Coast region post-Katrina.

The river carves in majesty;
Together we survive.
This is our love,
This is our life,
This is our home, Louisiana.
This is our day.
Come what may; this is our home

Church bells ring, the children sing;
My sunshine you are mine.
Hello old friends, I knew you well;
Together we'll unwind.
All our prayers mean no good now,
May all our work be pure.
May we be thankful once again,
Together we endure.
This is our love,
This is our life,
This is our home, Louisiana.
This is our day.
Come what may; this is our home

ARCHITECTURE

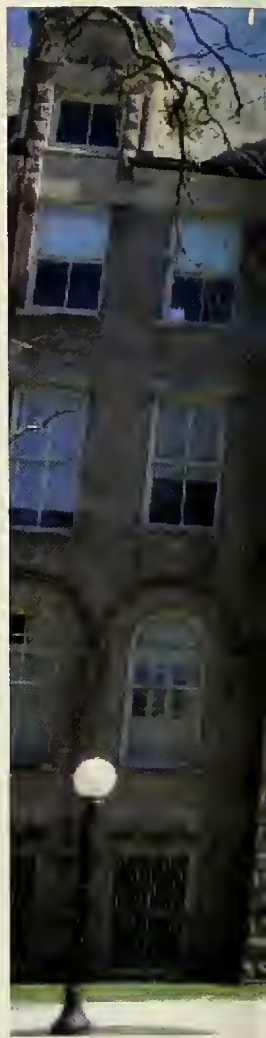

In 1894, Tulane University offered the first courses in architecture leading to a degree in architectural engineering. Only about a dozen schools of architecture had been established in the United States at this time.

A full four-year professional curriculum in architecture, leading to the bachelor's degree, was established in the College of Technology (Engineering) in 1907.

At the conclusion of the Second World War, the faculty and enrollment increased to accommodate returning veterans. The school continued to grow throughout the next two decades.

In 1971, the School of Architecture renovated and moved into its present facility, the Richardson Memorial Building, and experienced another increase in enrollment that continued throughout the seventies.

In 1975, a small graduate program began, offering a course of study leading to the Master of Architecture II as a second professional degree. In the summer of 1990, the School began a program offering a Master of Architecture I as a first professional degree for students with undergraduate degrees in other disciplines. The program awarded its first degrees in 1993 and was granted accreditation in 1994. Beginning in fall of 1999, the School began offering a five-year Master of Architecture I (professional degree) to students who have not earned a bachelor degree.

Richardson Memorial Building holds the School of Architecture. This building is one of several on campus that carries the name of Richardson, frequently confusing new students.

During Architect's Week, small groups of architecture students gather together and create projects which they then implement to further their application skills in their field. Following Hurricane Katrina, one group chose to help rebuild a local women's health clinic and daycare center in Treme. They worked together for days to create an outdoor play area, bulletin board, and bamboo garden for the clinic.

A. B. Freeman School of Business

Created in 1914, the A. B. Freeman School of Business is known throughout the nation to be one of the best business schools in the country. The school is in the Goldring/Woldenberg Hall, a newer building with cutting edge technology, including multiple computer labs and internet access in every classroom.

There are several groups created specifically for business students. Alpha Kappa Psi is the Business fraternity. Other organizations include the American Marketing Association, Freeman Student Government, Toastmasters, Tulane Entrepreneurs Association, and Tulane International Business Society, among many others.

The Business school offers Accounting, Consumer Behavior/Marketing, Finance, Legal Studies in Business, Managing Human and Social Capital, Information Systems and Process Management, and Strategy and Entrepreneurship.

The Elmwood and Biloxi campuses are both part of the School of Continuing Studies. The Elmwood campus is located in Harahan. The Biloxi Campus, located in Biloxi, Mississippi, is Tulane University's most recent addition. This campus, housed in the Edgewater Mall, has wireless internet and new computer labs. Both campuses offer morning, afternoon, and night classes in order for the classes to fit around the student's schedule.

While attending one of these campuses, students can work towards a bachelor's degree, an associate's degree, a subject specific certificate, or a Master of Liberal Arts degree. The Dean of the School of Continuing Studies is Richard A. Marksbury. John W. Olsen is the Assistant Dean of the Mississippi. Paul Forbes is the Director of the Elmwood campus.

School of Engineering

Originally called the College of Technology, the School of Engineering was created in 1894.

The School of Engineering offers major programs in the areas of biomedical engineering, chemical engineering, mechanical engineering, civil and environmental engineering, electrical engineering and computer science, and computer engineering.

The main Engineering building is the Lindy Claiborne Boggs Center for Energy and Biotechnology. Other engineering buildings include Walter E. Blessy

Hall and Stanley O. Thomas Hall.

The Dean of the School of Engineering is Nicholas J. Altiero. Dean Altiero, see at left, has a PhD in Aerospace Engineering. He has been the Dean since June of 2000, and is the ninth dean of the school of engineering.

Graduate School

Graduate work was first provided at Tulane University in 1883 and 1884. Under several different names and forms of administration, graduate work continued to develop. Four students received Master of Arts degrees in 1885, and the first Doctor of Philosophy degree was conferred in 1887. In 1925, the Faculty of programs at Tulane University are strong and thriving.

"Our department is back and we seem to be "bitting on all cylinders" right now. Katrina's affect was mininmal in terms of damage and most of our students returned. However, we did lose several adjunct faculty due to budget restrictions caused by the storm. We have replaced some and the new "Professor of Practice" position has helped us immensely. We look forward to a good productive and creative year. "

University College

University College is the primary outreach division of Tulane University. Since 1890, it has been dedicated to Tulane's tradition of lifelong learning. A high school diploma or GED is required for admission, and tuition for the 2006/2007 academic year is $765 for a three-credit course.

The School of Continuing Studies offers bachelor's degrees, associate's degrees, pre- and post-baccalaureate certificates and the master of liberal arts degree. University College students can earn degrees in the areas of:

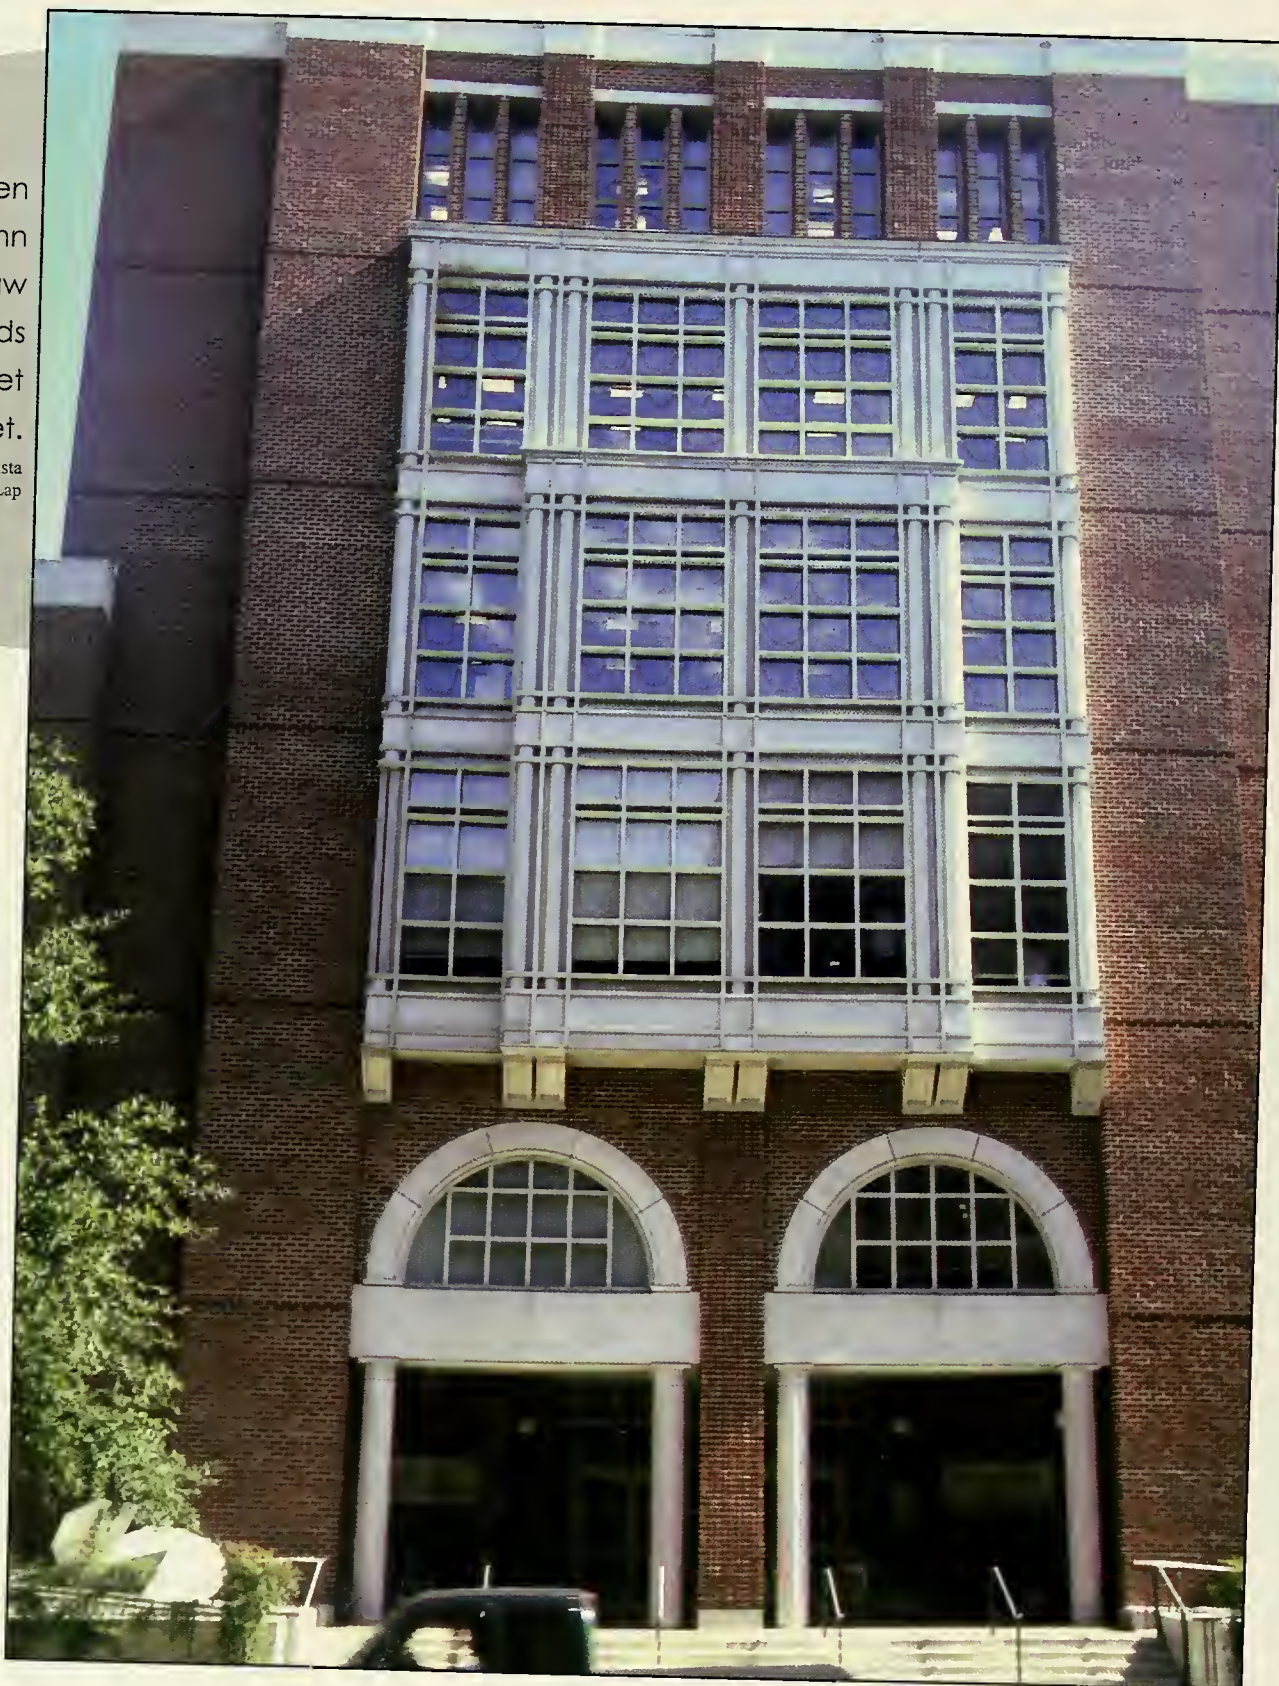

Casino Resort Studies	Paralegal Studies
Digital Design	Small Business Development
Homeland Security Studies	Accounting
Journalism	Accounting and Finance
Liberal Arts Majors	Advertising
Media Arts	Applied Business
Public Relations	Graphic Design
Social Science	Louisiana Studies

Ponoroff graduated from Loyola University of Chicago 1975 with a B.A., and Stanford University in 1978 with a J.D. He became Dean of the School of Law at Tulane in 2001 and is the 21st dean of the school.

Tulane Law has several student organizations and offers several major programs. The areas of concentration include Admiralty and Maritime Law, Comparative and Civil Law, Constitutional Law, Consumer Law, Corporate and Commercial Law, Criminal Law, Environmental and Energy Law, Ethics, Family Law, Intellectual Property and Technology, International and Comparative Law, Labor Law, Legal History and Jurisprudence, Procedure, Public Interest Law, Real Property and Real Estate Law, Regulation, Sports Law, State and Local Government, and Taxation.

Medical School

Following Hurricane Katrina, the Medical School suffered severe cuts as part of the Renewal Plan.

Due to the storm, it was too difficult to move the residency students from their host school and return them to Tulane mid-year. Thus, the medical students remained at the Baylor School of Medicine in Houston to study for the entire academic year, returning for such local milestones as Mardi Gras.

Tulane's University Hospital and Clinic, situated in downtown New Orleans, suffered some damage due to Hurricane Katrina but were rebuilt and are now open and functioning once more.

The Dean of the School of Medicine is Paul Kieran Whelton, M.D., M.Sc.

The school of Medicine offers programs in the departments of anesthesiology, biochemistry, dermatology, family and community medicine, medicine, microbiology and immunology, neurosurgery, obstetrics and gynecology, ophthalmology, orthopaedics, otolaryngology, pathology and laboratory medicine, pediatrics, pharmacology, physiology, psychiatry and neurology, radiology, structural and cellular biology, surgery, and urology.

Tulane's medical school was unable to accept any new surgical resident applications for the coming year due to the storm; however, applications to the medical school in general were strong while Tulane kept academic standards stringent as usual.

TULANE COLLEGE

Tulane University was founded in 1884, after the reorganization of the University of Louisiana. Tulane College is the men's division of liberal arts with Tulane University. The separation of the colleges into men's and women's provided an opportunity for students to receive a single sex education within a co-educational university.

In 1984, Tulane moved from its downtown location to today's uptown campus. In 1993, the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences became known as Tulane College.

Cudd Hall sits on the academic quad representing Tulane College. People congregate on the porch on hot days, making the house feel less formal and more like a social organization.

Tulane College admitted their first African American students in spring 1963.

Located in Cudd Hall, Tulane College has a Big/Little Brother program to help freshmen get acquainted with their new life situation. Although not as rich in programming as Newcomb College, men find Tulane College a haven on the Tulane campus for brotherhood and social interaction.

Newcomb College

Newcomb College was created in 1886 as a women's college. It eventually became the women's division of liberal arts at Tulane University. Josephine Louise Newcomb created the college in memoriam of her deceased daughter, H. Sophie Newcomb.

The first president of Newcomb College was V. B. Dixon. He created Newcomb High School to prepare younger women for college level academics.

Newcomb College moved to Newcomb building on the Uptown campus in 1918. It is said that the oak trees lining the Newcomb Quad were each grown from acorns plucked from the oak trees adorning the original Newcomb College campus. The acorn and the daisy are two well-known symbols of the college.

Around 1970, co-ed classes were beginning to be taught at the University. Newcomb admitted its first African American student in fall 1963. In the 1980s, Newcomb College merged with Tulane Liberal Arts and Sciences, creating the Newcomb we know today.

Newcomb has a Big/Little Sister Program similar to that of Tulane College, as well as many other programming options including Intensive Newcomb and the Newcomb Leadership Retreat.

School of Public Health and Tropical Sciences

Tulane University School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine is committed to advancing public health through teaching, research and practice. The school is comprised of seven academic departments including biostatistics, community health sciences, environmental health sciences, epidemiology, health systems management, international health and development, and tropical medicine. In the past fiscal year, our researchers earned approximately $30 million in funding from the National Institutes of Health and other federal, state, foundation and international sources. Recent internationally respected research includes the development of a malaria vaccine, mitigation of HIV/AIDS health complications, obesity prevention and disaster management.

Our students, faculty and staff represent more than 70 cultures and traditions around the world. Their presence enriches our institution with unique ideas and perspectives. Our students and researchers can be found working throughout the world. The Tulane University Health Office for Latin America in Lima, Peru, and the Tulane University Asia Elite Leadership program in Taiwan are examples of some of our international partnerships.

Established in 1912, Tulane University School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine is the oldest school of public health in the country – and today is among the largest. In spring 2006, the school launched an undergraduate program in public health, furthering its mission to develop the next generation of public health professionals worldwide.

The study of public health in Louisiana began in the last century, when New Orleans suffered from endemic malaria and almost yearly epidemics of cholera and yellow fever. Attempts to control tropical diseases led to the establishment of the Medical College of Louisiana in 1834. In 1881, formal instruction in hygiene was offered for the first time. In 1947, the Departments of Tropical Medicine and Preventive Medicine were merged to establish the Department of Tropical Medicine and Public Health in the School of Medicine.

The School is a separate component of the Tulane University Medical Center and is allied with the School of Medicine, Tulane National Primate Research Center and Tulane University Hospital and Clinic. School-wide centers include the Center for Cardiovascular Health, Institute for Health Services Research, Tulane-Xavier Center of Excellence for Women's Health and Environmental Diseases Prevention Research Center.

Pierre Buekens is dean of the School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine.

School of Social Work

The Southern School of Social Sciences and Public Services was the first training program for social workers in the Deep South. In 1914, a group of Tulane social science faculty, under the sponsorship of the Kingsley Settlement House, offered the first classes in social welfare. A formal one-year program was implemented in 1921 and sponsored by grants from the American Red Cross,

By 1927, the school became a separate program with a two-year curriculum qualifying students for the master of arts due to funding from a Rockefeller grant. The degree of Master of Social Work was established in 1935, and has been awarded to more than 4,700 students from all 50 of the United States and over 30 other countries.

The idea of creating a community of scholars and learners and being a welcoming community best describes the School of Social Work. Since our return in December 2005 after Hurricane Katrina nothing is clearer to us at the school than the fact that we are all part of a community and that we are not in the world alone. This is a central and underlying framework which guides the curriculum and training at our school.

After the interruption from the storm in August, the Tulane School of Social Work, along with the rest of the University, opened its doors to a full spring semester. Since January, the school has been central to the rebuilding of New Orleans' many communities through our engagement with numerous existing and new programs and projects and creation of several new field opportunities for student training. While New Orleans is well on its way to recovery, the post storm environment of the city has offered exciting and important opportunities for graduate social work student training. These programs provide hands on training forums for learning about crisis management, mental health programming with groups, children, families and couples, the use of the arts in working with children, aging programs, substance abuse, domestic violence, civic and community engagement, and many many more.

Engagement defines the Tulane School of Social Work. Through its dedicated faculty, involved student body and committed alumni, the school maintains an active presence with its students, many other schools and departments of the university and the local, national and international community. Overall, we believe we have created a uniquely challenging and coherent program. It is firmly rooted in strong social work traditions while integrating the most innovative knowledge and skills available today.

-Ron Marks, Dean of School of Social Work

Lagniappe Semester

Tulane gives a little somethin' extra

Lagniappe, a creole word meaning "a little something extra", was the name given to the seven-week semester added to the 2005-2006 academic year.

To make up for time lost from school, and time spent away from New Orleans and Tulane, the administration and faculty provided a lagniappe semester sandwiched between spring and summer terms where students could take up to three condensed classes and earn regular semester credits.

Over two-thirds of the undergraduate population chose to participate in this academic lagniappe.

Classes were held Mondays through Thursdays, with a three-day weekend. The weekends provided ample time for Tulane to host a myriad of events and speakers including Brian Williams, Laura Bush, Madeleine Albright and Walter Isaacson.

Because of the short learning period, no finals were held and the semester ended at the beginning of July, allowing the university to hold both summer terms as normal.

Lagniappe semester was a unique experience, created in response to Hurricane Katrina and hopefully never to be experienced again...despite its overwhelming success.

Hullabaloo 2005

The eyes and ears were still on the job from afar

Hurricane Katrina didn't stop the Tulane Hullabaloo newspaper from being the eyes and ears of Tulane.

From their varied ports of call after the storm, the members of the Hullabaloo brought the news to the Tulane community. The staff of the Daily Pennsylvanian at the University of Pennsylvania hosted Editor in Chief Kate Schafer and gave the Hullabaloo a command center of sorts. From there, the staff fanned out and brought the news to the evacuees via the Hullabaloo website.

For their efforts, the Hullabaloo was recognized by the New York Times, and won the appreciation of the many for whom the newspaper was one more link back to the place we all call home.

These are a sample of the news stories that appeared on the website. For the complete stories, and for more on the semester that wasn't, go to www.theHullabaloo.com and check the archives.

Tulane University Takes Moderate Damage from Katrina

By David Murphy

September 30, 2005

New Orleans — Tulane University's uptown campus was spared the horrific damage some areas of New Orleans received after Hurricane Katrina, but significant cleanup remains if the university is to stay on schedule for re-opening for the spring semester. Flooding, downed trees and damaged roofs are among the most noticeable signs of damage on campus, but luckily, a glancing blow by Hurricane Rita does not appear to have caused any additional damage.

President Scott Cowen took press members on a tour of campus to point out the damage and field questions. Despite the damage to campus, Cowen was happy to report that applications are actually up 50 percent from the same period last year. The storm was able to bring out Tulane's excellent reputation, and that many students want to be part of the recovery operation, said Cowen.

Cowen indicated that Tulane is a university for the "academically qualified adventure seeker," and was optimistic about the number of students returning for the spring semester.

"Of the 13,000 students we have, only 100 have withdrawn as of now," said Cowen. Tulane has hired disaster recovery contractor Belford to handle the repairs of the campus. Belford has over 50 years of experience in disaster recovery operations of all types and believes they can have the majority of campus fully operational by late December.

It is important not only for the Tulane community to start school again, but for all of New Orleans, said Cowen. Tulane is the largest private employer in New Orleans, with over 6,000 employees.

"We are one of the bright lights in Orleans parish...if we can't get running, how can other people expect to?" said Cowen.

Buildings in the academic quad were in remarkably good shape. There was some roof damage and blown out windows on Lindy Boggs, which caused water damage. The School of Social Work building suffered a major collapse on the north side of the building, leaving a pile of bricks on the ground below.

Aside from these problems and a few piles of trash, the quad looked as though nothing had happened. Buildings north of Ferret Street were not so lucky however. Some buildings took several inches of water, leaving a foul smelling, thick black residue as well as mold. Bruff Commons had significant flooding of more than 20 inches in some areas.

All the residential dorms took some water on the first floor, including the Wall dormitory, which had only been open one day. The Willow Residence computer lab withstood about 18 inches of water, ruining some of the computers.

An abandoned boat lay beached on the sidewalk outside Reily Recreation Center, where the water reached the second tier of steps leading to the front entrance.

Water damage was a major concern in the basement of the library, where many priceless historic documents are kept. Salvage teams brought in giant pumps and air conditioners to remove the water. Afterward, the damaged materials were moved into climate-controlled trailers for recovery efforts.

"One of the very first things [Belford] did was to take a look at the materials in the basement of the library and decide how to restore all of those particular items," said Cowen.

High winds ripped tiles and insulation out from the parking area underneath Reily, leaving piles of debris on parked cars. Large pilings from the Turchin Stadium construction project floated down campus as far as the Diboll parking complex. Monk Simons, which is located directly behind Reily, took nearly two feet of water. Recovery teams are also documenting damage to personal property in the dorms. Student's possessions which were damaged by the storm were photographed and then stored in trailers parked on McAlister.

Students get 'a little something extra'

By Kim Borneman

October 07, 2005

Austin, Texas — The Tulane University administration announced this week it would be offering "a little something extra" - an optional lagniappe semester during the summer of 2006. While all students are invited to attend, everyone who paid full tuition for fall 2005 and spring 2006 will be allowed to take classes free of tuition.

The seven-week semester will begin May 15 following the spring exam period and a short break. The lagniappe semester is being offered to keep students on track with their academic careers.

"It allows students a couple of opportunities," Assistant Provost Mike Hogg said. "One is, if they don't feel comfortable about taking a full schedule in the spring they can use the lagniappe semester to catch up, or if they didn't take a full load in the fall semester they can use the lagniappe to catch up. Or if they just wanted to get ahead."

"It's really important for certain students like me to stay on track with their schedules," Heather Klavan, a Newcomb College sophomore, said. "As a pre-med student, we have certain classes that we have to take at certain times, and if we don't complete the schedule, it messes up our entire academic career."

Although course schedules have not been posted online, the administration ensured students on its Web site that "courses that are typically available as the second half of a fall and spring sequence will be available in the Lagniappe Semester."

"I like that they're offering the semester for free, it's a really nice thing to do," Klavan said. "Some students could be really put back by losing a semester, and this really provides incentive for us to come back."

Tulane trounces SMU: Green Wave capture first win of the season 31-10

By Chris Burcham
September 28, 2005

Dallas — Looking eye to eye with another hurricane, Tulane Football didn't flinch.

The arrival of Hurricane Rita to the Texas coast, one month after Hurricane Katrina wreaked havoc on New Orleans, Tulane University and Green Wave Football forced a few more changes to Tulane. The satellite office of the university closed and the game versus SMU was pushed from 7 p.m. to 1 p.m.

"We're playing for a lot of people and the pressure is high, but our coaches and players are all up for the challenge," head coach Chris Scelfo said. "We are representing our university and our city, and that gives us inspiration."

The time change didn't affect the No. 1 ranked Green Wave defense. Following a heart-breaking loss to Mississippi State in the season opener where Tulane looked as hapless as ever, they came out with a mission - defense.

"I can't say enough about our defense," Scelfo said. "Going into the year, I felt like we had some depth. We don't have any seniors in our top-eight linemen, but we have three linebackers that are all seniors. They have been through a lot."

That defense led the day, holding SMU to only 127 yards per game. This is after holding Mississippi State to 225 yards the week before. On the season, Tulane is allowing just 176 total yards per game, top in the country. The next best is Connecticut, which is allowing 197.67 yards per game.

Offensively, junior Lester Ricard led an air attack completing 22 of 34 passes for 213 yards and two touchdowns. The first in the air was a 16-yard bomb to junior Damarcus Davis with 11:12 left in the fourth quarter. The second was a 27-yard shot to Bubba Terranova to put the final score at 31-10.

The success in the air was possible because of the strong ground game. Sophomore Matt Fort led all rushers with 94 yards and two touchdowns, and senior Jovon Jackson gained 54.

Tulane dominated from the initial kickoff to the final whistle, holding the ball for 40 minutes 36 seconds while SMU only managed to hold the ball for 19 minutes 24 seconds.

Tulane's defense was led by senior Tra Boger who had seven tackles, one for a loss and a sack. Junior Craig Morris contributed 4.5 tackles for loss and sophomore Alvin Johnson had two of the seven team sacks.

Cowen meets with returning students

By David Murphy
November 11, 2005

New Orleans — Tulane President Scott Cowen held a town hall meeting at the Reilly Recreation Center Saturday. The meeting was for students returning to campus to collect belongings left behind as they sought refuge from Hurricane Katrina.

President Cowen praised the resiliency of Tulane students across the nation for dealing with the effects of the catastrophe. He recounted his involvement in the events immediately before and after the storm saying that the school's evacuation plan "worked the way it should have."

Cowen moved on to highlight current and future business of the university. Several departments of Tulane have been moved out of state so they can focus on their missions.

Recruitment has been moved to Virginia, Financial Services has moved to Connecticut, and the information technology department has moved to Philadelphia.

Cowen defended the administration's decision to assist Dillard and Xavier Universities as they struggle to recover. Dillard took nearly 10 feet of water and lost three buildings to fire.

Cowen discussed what he called the "renewal" chapter of Tulane's history. He claimed that Tulane will not diminish academically in any way and that students will have unprecedented opportunities to become involved in the "greatest recovery effort in U.S. history." Cowen stated that there will be no drastic increase in tuition and that only one faculty member has left Tulane.

Tulane announces drastic changes to university

Board approves plan to cut 80 percent of Engineering School, trim varsity athletics programs, combine Tulane, Newcomb and University Colleges

By Kate Schafer
December 11, 2005

In a statement Thursday, President Scott Cowen announced major changes in every aspect of Tulane life.

"We are having a whole new model for undergraduate education," Cowen said.

Starting in fall of 2006, students in the liberal arts and sciences will no longer be sent to Newcomb college for women and Tulane College for men.

All students not entering in the Business School's new four-year plan. Architecture, or Engineering schools will enter through the undergraduate College. Former full time University College students will also enter through the College.

The College will then be Liberal Arts, and the Sciences will be moved to the new School of Science and Engineering.

However, students like Tulane College Vice President Kunal Verma are concerned with losing the legacy of having Newcomb and Tulane colleges. "I think it detracts from the University... the separate colleges setup is one of our most distinctive features, this is a time to promote what we have to offer and attract more students... I fear that combining Tulane and Newcomb will do the opposite," said Verma.

Lee Hoffman (N'91) agrees with Verma. "I am appalled at the administration's apparent plan to completely do away with one of the things that made Tulane unique: Newcomb College and Tulane College. While Tulane's survival is admittedly paramount, what good will that survival be if all of its cherished institutions are lost forever? Additional thought must be given to this decision lest the cure turn out to be worse than the disease."

Although some alumni are frustrated with the decision the administration has made, Former Vice President of Student Life Matt Coleman (TC'04) agrees the move was necessary to ensure Tulane's survival. "I think they choose survival by the best means necessary according to them."

Mardi Gras not deterred by Katrina, Rita

By Emily Hohenwarter
December 07, 2005

New Orleans will celebrate Mardi Gras this year, but festivities will be shortened due to the aftermath of this fall's hurricanes. The city will observe the 150th anniversary of its hosting of Mardi Gras.

The Mardi Gras season in New Orleans will be abridged, only lasting for two weekends.

New Orleans is counting on the success of Mardi Gras to boost its economy. Even a smaller Mardi Gras is hoped to put New Orleans back on its feet and prove that New Orleans can be rebuilt.

Tulane University spring break will coincide with Mardi Gras this year, taking place the week of Feb 26.

The elite eight: The 8 essential names at Tulane

When asked what a typical day's schedule involves, Carolyn Barber-Pierre, assistant vice president for student affairs, laughs. Barber-Pierre's role on campus includes everything from the direction and management of staff to creating student programs and teaching classes.

Barber-Pierre has been a faculty member at Tulane since 1984 but has only held her current title since 2003. Previously she served positions including the associate dean of student affairs and the associate dean of students.

Barber-Pierre decided to teach as a way to "get the opportunity to teach and interact." This semester she will be teaching a Brazilian dance class and co-teaching an English course.

According to Barber-Pierre, the many different tasks are rewarding when a student thanks her for making an impact.

"I feel like I'm doing my job, and people see value and purpose to having me," Barber-Pierre said.

One of Barber-Pierre's favorite spots at Tulane is the Reilly Recreation Center. There she not only enjoys the facilities, but she can also see the students and talk with them.

When Barber-Pierre is not at Tulane, she keeps busy at home with her 10-year-old son. "If I'm not working here then I'm working with my son," Barber-Pierre said.

Traveling is another one of her passions. She has traveled many places, including South Africa, Egypt and her favorite country, Brazil.

Barber-Pierre urges student to take advantage of all that Tulane has to offer, and to remember the importance of helping others.

"I would always encourage students to give back," Barber-Pierre said.

Billye Potts

If you have any questions about orientation, Billye Potts is the person to go to. Potts began her interest in the orientation program when she was a student and orientation coordinator and has now worked in student affairs for 18 years.

Potts has worked in the newly created Office of New Student Programs and helped compile the orientation CD freshmen receive before arriving at Tulane.

Potts finds the most rewarding part of her job is working with all the students. However, she finds it challenging to dispatch the vast amount of information to all the new incoming freshmen.

To get away from the piles of work in the office, Potts goes to the Reilly Recreation Center and is active in the community.

"Living in New Orleans is like being in college," Potts explains. She enjoys going to all the Saints games, going to theater festivals, racing with her husband and eating at her favorite restaurant.

A s for advice for freshmen, Potts says it may take a while to adjust to college life. She recommends freshmen should meet a lot of people, not only fellow students but faculty and administrators as well. Furthermore, Potts suggests to "leave your room."

There is so much to take advantage of around campus, she explains, students should get involved with activities and organizations on campus, as well as activities off campus.

I'm going to poke you. Normally, a remark such as this would warrant a puzzled glance or even hostility. But Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs Kevin Bailey knows that poking is just another way to meet people on the internet these days. For it is to interact with students, "poking" can often be an invaluable tool.

Bailey's job is to oversee all of the activities that take place outside of the classroom. He works with the clubs, fraternities and sororities that make up the majority of the groups putting on activities. Bailey's current project: aiding with this year's orientation, the massive introductory ceremony put on by the student affairs office every year.

Bailey has found it essential to familiarize himself with the popular trends of today. The internet phenomenon "The Facebook" has come to his attention as a way to connect with the students. He sees it not only a tool to learn about the student body, but also a unique means to get to know it on a personal basis. Bailey goes out of his way to make sure that he's well versed with the goings on of the students. Bailey went so far as to start watching reality television in an attempt to better understand the popular culture endorsed by the student body. When asked, Bailey said that his favorite show was Real Gilligan's Island. Though he made no open endorsement, it is believed that

Bailey was a fan of the Skipper. Along with his duties at the office of Student Affairs, Bailey also serves as the Chief Judicial Officer. This role carries with it the responsibility of protecting the rights of the students at Tulane. The only way to see Bailey under this title is to step out of line in a major way. Though he's a very cool character, he takes his job very seriously.

But poor behavior isn't the only way to meet Bailey. Around lunchtime, you can easily find him in the Bubble eating a slice of pizza with a coffee. And if all else fails, you can always poke him.

President Scott Cowen

"What I want to be when I grow up is a Tulane student," President Scott Cowen said.

Unfortunately for Cowen, he has to settle with being the leader and figurehead of Tulane University. As a leader, Cowen not only focuses on maintaining the school's reputation but also works to promote Tulane across the country and secure a successful future for all those involved. On a daily basis he works with all aspects of the Tulane community including students, faculty and alumni.

"When I'm here on campus, the vast majority of the time is in meetings with various constituencies or senior officers," Cowen said. "The day usually starts at about seven in the morning, most nights end about 10 when I'm here in town." This past week, Cowen has been focusing on the incoming freshman class as well as his convocation which will be delivered tomorrow.

The speech will emphasize the importance of learning both inside and outside the classroom, balancing social activities with intellectual ones and really experiencing everything Tulane and New Orleans have to offer.

"If there's a message I'm going to say to the freshmen, it's going to be take a holistic view of the college experience," Cowen said. "It's more than just what goes on in the classroom. And get involved in everything. I'm excited to have the students back on campus. It was getting a little boring without them."

Leland Bennet

With such a large undertaking as the construction of the new Lavin-Burnnock University Center, Tulane needed an expert with knowledge of the old structure and intelligence to use the new technology necessary to build the new center. When the time came, the role of overseeing this behemoth of a project ultimately fell to the director of the former University Center, Leland Bennet.

Mr. Bennet is the man who knows all of the details in regard to the new UC. He knows the entire project inside and out. Like an enthusiastic child showing off his Crayola masterpiece, Bennet proudly displays the plans for the new center, complete with colorful personal corrections and additions.

But as knowledgeable as Bennet is of the whole affair, he did not start out overseeing the construction of UCs. Bennet was formerly a band director at West Jefferson High School. He left his podium and baton in 1966 to take on a different role at Tulane University. Though he is approaching his 40th year on campus, his excitement makes it seem like it's his first.

Even with his great number of years at school, Bennet prides himself on not simply being another "old fuddy duddy." The one thing that gives him more pleasure than working at school is the opportunity to learn new skills in the process. "I'm happy to get up for work everyday. Today I learned about magnetic card readers...it's amazing."

Though the project is six months behind schedule, Bennet is optimistic about its completion. His chief concern at the moment is insuring that the infrastructure is safe.

When asked if he will continue on as the director of the UC once the project is complete, Bennet replied, "Tulane is a great place to work, and I'll work here as long as I can."

Construction at Tulane UC in progress Wall ready for fall To come

For nearly a year and a half now the University Center has been out of use and undergoing construction. This year will be no different as the expanding Lavin-Burnnock University Center will not be finished in time for the 2005-2006 school year.

Administrative officials pushed back the opening, originally set for October, to July 2006.

Despite setbacks, Dr. Cynthia Cherrey, the Vice President of Student Affairs, still has high hopes. She believes that the $37 million spent on the project will turn the UC into the "crossroads of both the intellectual and social interaction on campus."

The new UC was designed by Vincent James and Associates of Minneapolis. It will be a staple of the ever-expanding campus and testament to the effective fundraising of President Scott Cowen and the Tulane community.

The building's namesakes, Lavin-Burnnock, were the main contributors while smaller donations made the project possible without being a burden on student tuition.

The Lavin-Burnnock Center will be nearly 80,000 square feet, housing all student programs and media offices, student government, student bookstore and up-to-date student meeting rooms.

At Tulane University, construction has become an accepted way of life at Tulane University. After more than a year of work, one of the several construction projects has been concluded. Wall Residential College is the most recent addition to campus housing.

By promoting interaction between students and faculty outside of the classroom, the Residential College Program is planned to encourage a sense of community between all members involved.

This residential system first appeared at Cambridge and Oxford universities and has since spread to more than 65 universities, including Harvard and Yale. About 250 incoming freshman and returning students will live in the newly-completed dorm.

Erica Woodley, residential college director and assistant director of residential education, said, "I want [students] to largely define the community that they live in - to hold each other accountable for things and to create the community they want to be."

Students living in the dorm will serve on at least one of the nine committees headed by residential advisers. Issues such as community service, academic enrichment and wellness, and hall government will be addressed by the committees.

In addition to the students, advisers and staff living in Wall, a family of four will occupy a first floor apartment.

Spanish and Portuguese Professor Christopher Dunn will act as the building's professor-in-residence. His wife Ladee Hubbard, their four-year-old daughter Isa and newborn Joaquin will live in the newly constructed residence.

Tulane spends around $25 million annually on renovations and new construction projects. This year, incoming students will move into the recently built Wall Residential College and will be able to use the new Lavin-Burnnock University Center once it is completed.

In the near future, Tulane students will see the highly anticipated renovations to Turchin Stadium and the assembly of a brand new dorm, currently named Residential College II, on the site of what was formerly New Doris.

The prospect of living on a campus with much ongoing construction meets with mixed reactions from students, especially those new to this environment.

"It's OK to have construction, but they should be finished by move-in day. It feels like they are not ready for us," Kelsea Bice, a Newcomb College freshman, said.

Pat McCoy, a Tulane College freshman, sees the situation differently. "I like [construction] because it shows progress."

ASB elections

Tulane University students will have another chance to vote for their Associated Student Body president. The elections, which ran from Monday to Thursday, resulted in a close finish and will call for a runoff election next week.

"It will be a good runoff," Sara Dwyer, a presidential candidate from the Tulane School of Medicine, said Dwyer and Tony Vanky, a candidate from the School of Architecture, received the highest number of votes in this week's election.

Out of the five candidates, no one candidate received enough votes to obtain the winning margin. A second election will be held between Dwyer and Vanky to decide the final outcome.

The polls for the runoff will open Sunday at midnight and close Wednesday at midnight.

Voter apathy was apparent in the polls. Only 1,547 students voted in an election that included both the undergraduate and graduate constituents.

The other three candidates Daisy Gurdian (Newcomb College), Vipin Meena (Graduate School of Engineering) and Cole (Tulane College) fell behind by a large margin. Vanky garnered 29.5 percent but was marked down 1.5 percent for a campaigning infraction; Dwyer received 28.3 percent of the votes; Gurdian received 17.4 percent; Meena got 14.4 percent and Bryan Cole totaled 9.5 percent, but was marked down .5 percent for a campaign infraction.

There were also technical difficulties as the online voting gave many people error messages

N.O. hungry to return

Molly Breeskin

Five months after Hurricane Katrina, authentic New Orleans meals are not in short supply like many thought they would be. With more restaurants reopening every day and a hungry college population back in the city to frequent them, many restaurant owners are optimistic.

New Orleans, a city known for its food, is home to some of the most committed restaurant owners in the country, many of whom were willing to weather the storm.

Brad Hollingsworth, the owner of Clancy's Restaurant, literally did just that. He stayed in his restaurant during the hurricane to make sure the generator was running, to protect the restaurant's wine cellar.

Although popular restaurants like Commander's Palace, Emeril's DelMonico, The Cheesecake Bistro and Acme Oyster House remain closed, many of the smaller businesses have suffered the most.

Nearly 90 percent of New Orleans' pre-Katrina population worked for small businesses and restaurants, and public officials are emphasizing the importance of re-establishing these enterprises. According to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the U.S. Small Business Administration has approved over 5,000 businesses for disaster assistance loans, totaling $412 million.

"Every business or school that reopens in the city is going to help all businesses in the city," Bourbon House manager Jim Leslie said.

Before Katrina, the city's nearly 4,000 eating establishments employed about 55,000 workers. But many restaurants remain dark, with varying damage and little if any promise for the future. Even if some displaced restaurant workers have jobs waiting for them in the city, they are not able to find housing.

With little tourism in the past months, the demographic visiting the restaurants has changed.

Those establishments that have been able to open, however, have had no problem filling their table.

Since Bourbon House was one of the first big restaurants to reopen (Oct. 3), it attracted many locals because it was one of the only options. Prior to Katrina, most of the restaurant's business came from tourism and business meetings.

The demographic has changed all over the city as well. Relief workers have become a new customer, and with local universities back in session, students have added a welcome 20 percent to New Orleans' dissipated population.

These students are already pumping money into the city's suffering economy by consuming a hearty meal. But they have also returned to serve as employees.

The Renewal Plan, proposed by Tulane University President Scott Cowen and passed by the Board of Trustees unanimously, calls for the dissolution of Tulane and Newcomb college, to create a single undergraduate college. With $36 million in endowments on the line, Newcomb College has the most at stake.

In response to the concerns of current Newcomb students and alumni around the world, a Traditions Task Force, staffed by six members of the Board of Trustees, was created to determine what should be done with the remainder of Newcomb and Tulane colleges.

The Newcomb Dean's Student

Leader Task Force, a panel of Newcomb student leaders from various backgrounds chose by the Dean, met with the board's task force on Jan. 26 to discuss their position on Newcomb's future. Later, a larger group of Newcomb women met with the force at the Newcomb Rally and Town Hall Meeting.

Women, and men from Tulane College, stood in line to ask questions. The Task Force listened as students regaled stories of how Newcomb changed their lives. They spoke of their opportunities for leadership, advancement and the sense of community the college provides.

Women of all ages flew in from all over the country to voice their frustrations and assure the task force that Newcomb is an important part of Tulane, New Orleans and the world.

Mignon Faget, a prominent jewelry designer in New Orleans and Newcomb alumna ('55), attended the meeting to voice her passion for Newcomb arts.

She praised Newcomb as "world famous" and demanded that the task force recognize not only the name of the college, but the intent and content behind it. Yvette Jones, the vice president for public affairs, described the restructuring as a "joint undergraduate" experience.

Carol Cudd (NC '59) explained that the plan was presented as a "total package" which was almost impossible to refuse. President Cowen told the board that they

Biosciences help to bring New Orleans back

Yvette Jones chairs the biosciences subcommittee of Nagin's Bring New Orleans Back Commission.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency trailers and blue roof tarps suggest anything but biotechnology. However, Yvette Jones, chair of the biosciences subcommittee of Mayor Ray Nagin's Bring New Orleans Back Commission, wants to transform the Crescent City into a biotechnology hub. Local universities are central to her plan.

New Orleans' recovery tactics have become far more complex in the six months since Hurricane Katrina. Originally, Nagin proposed opening the downtown area to more casinos in order to draw people and wealth back into the city. However, according to NOLA.com, Governor Blanco did not approve of the idea of a Vegas style strip in New Orleans.

Instead, the mayor and his commission have taken a lesson from the local universities.

Jones, the senior vice president of external affairs at Tulane University, wants to base badly needed economic growth in the area on a focused industry: biotechnology.

Why biotechnology in a town better known for its laissez-faire attitude?

Jones answers that "New Orleans, before Katrina, had a rich medical compound." She refers to the research hospitals downtown and Tulane's revered medical school.

Tulane figures prominently in the biosciences recovery plan, as do the other local universities.

"What has driven the rebirth of economies of some cities has been that the universities have played a role in the development," Jones said.

In theory, the universities would provide technological and research input for what

editor-in-chief

With the first round of New Orleans municipal elections set for April 22, potential candidates have wasted no time in carefully considering their options. As many high-profile names such as New Orleans Mayor Ray Nagin and Louisiana Lieutenant Governor Mitch Landrieu announced their candidacy, Tulane University student Nick Bacque also decided to enter the race.

"It actually started as a joke between me and my friends," Bacque said. "Theo we found out how easy it is to become a mayoral candidate. I thought about it and told a few friends. Suddenly, the local news got word of my race for mayor and the response was strong."

Nick Bacque, a 24-year-old medical student, said this week he intends to represent a new and youthful approach to government. "I want to bring back New Orleans by nurturing the culture of the young student population," he said.

Bacque boasts an extensive academic background. While many students may spend six years completing one or two degrees, Bacque was scheduled to complete six degrees in six years.

"I have the theoretical education," Bacque explained. "And although I haven't been through the experiences other candidates have... a lot of [being mayor] is intelligence and the ability to learn quickly."

Working on his medical degree joint program with Masters of Public Health at Tulane, the Lafayette-native evacuated to Houston during Katrina. Although many evacuees of Katrina looked forward to returning, Bacque's return wasn't just to finish his sixth degree. Bacque, like all of the candidates for mayor, is ready to rebuild the city and has a plan for action.

"We need to rely on private enterprise," Bacque said. "[Renewal] has to happen in the private sector first."

Rebuilt and reloaded: Baseball targets Omaha again

Freshman Aja Barton headlines a revamped Tulane offense in 2006

In accord with the city it calls home, Tulane University's baseball team will look quite different than it did a year ago. Due to graduation and Major League Baseball, the Green Wave will feature many new faces in key roles. Due to Hurricane Katrina, the team will call Zephyr Field its home in 2006.

The similarities between the Green Wave and the city of New Orleans end here, however. New Orleans is rebuilding; the Green Wave is rebuilt.

Not to be overlooked amidst the youth movement is the core of big hitters looking to break out as they mature into veterans. Senior Nathan Southard is a preseason all-American who proved his worth last year by hitting .341.

At the corners, Tulane welcomes back third baseman Brad Emaus and first baseman Mark Hamilton. Emaus hit .321 last season to go with 13 home runs and 56 RBIs, while Hamilton posted a .314 average and swatted 11 homers while driving in 46.

"We are returning some veteran guys that I'm hoping will have great years for us, and if they do, we will certainly be a better club," Jones said. "There are guys that ... if he has the kind of year he is capable of having, free of injury and things fall into place, then we have a chance to have a club that's pretty good."

Despite what Jones acknowledges as a major loss, the departure of several veterans has cleared the way for a new throng of stars. Heavily-recruited freshman Aja Barto, who turned down the Philadelphia Phillies after they selected him in the 14th round of the MLB draft last summer, may turn a few heads in his pursuit to win a starting job in the outfield. Another freshman seeking regular work in the outfield is Warren McFadden, who red-shirted due to injury last season.

"We have some freshman that we are going to rely on heavily," Jones said. "It's a hard call, but those guys have been impressive in preseason and fall drills, and so going in, we'll count on those guys."

The 2005 season began with unprecedented high expectations, as the team was Baseball America's preseason No. 1. Anchored by a strong veteran core that was highlighted by current pro Brian Bogusevic and Micah Owings, Tulane totaled a 56-12 overall record, captured the Conference USA championship and the second College World Series appearance in school history. The end, however, was bitterly disappointing.

A startling loss to Baylor sent the Green Wave home much earlier than Jones anticipated. That loss, however, serves as the springboard for the 2006 edition of Tulane baseball.

Amidst the conference shakeups across the country, C-USA lost traditional basketball and football powerhouses Marquette, Cincinnati, DePaul and Louisville. While most of the attention centered on those sports, it was almost ignored that C-USA was transformed into one of the NCAA's most powerful baseball conferences.

The biggest newcomer challenger to Tulane's defense of the C-USA title is Rice, the 2003 national champion. The Owls begin the season ranked No. 7 by Baseball America, five spots ahead of Tulane's preseason ranking.

"We are second in C-USA with regional appearances in the history of the conference, we've been 17 times," Jones said. "East Carolina has been 21 times, they lead the conference, Houston has been 16 times, Rice 14, so that's going to be tough."

Outside of conference play the Green Wave will have tougher competition due to last season's success.

"South Alabama, they are picked to win their league. Oral Roberts, picked to win their league. Pepperdine, picked to win their league ... and the best Pepperdine team they've had since they won the World Series in '92," Jones said of this year's non-conference opponents. "So, it's another challenging schedule to say the least."

After having to live up to the pressure of a No. 1 ranking last year, the Green Wave find optimism in this season's No. 12 ranking.

"You never know how a season is going to go, look at last year, we beat Arizona State three times, badly," Jones said. "That was in February, but in June they are in the College World Series and stay longer than we do."

"We are going to keep playing and see how it goes, and have our young guys grow up in the process. We may take some lumps early, but we won't be too down about it, we'll keep playing."

The Green Wave begins its quest for a repeat trip to the World Series at noon today against TCU at Houston's Minute Maid Park.

Bullpen still crucial

Subhas Subramanyam
assistant sports editor

Last year, head coach Rick Jones had one of the biggest luxuries a college baseball coach could hope for.

It wasn't the powerful offense, solid defense up the middle or even a solid one-two punch carrying the rotation. It was the bullpen, widely considered one of the best in college baseball. The Green Wave was 49-0 when carrying a lead into the ninth inning prior to its season-ending loss to Baylor last summer.

But even with sophomore Sean Morgan and senior Billy Mohl leaving the bullpen to join the starting rotation, this year's group might be turn out to be just as dominant as 2005's.

"I think our bullpen has the potential to be as good as last year," junior right-hander Daniel Latham said. "We've got a really talented bunch that I think is going to prove a lot."

But considering how successful last year's group was, and with the added importance of the bullpen's role with last year's top two starters now in the pros, there will be a ton of pressure on the group to perform at a high level.

But this year's bullpen is not phased by the added pressure.

"There's always pressure, especially at the end of a game," senior Blake Walker said. "Tulane's had a couple of great bullpens in the past, but I think it's good that we challenge ourselves."

Latham, who is among 30 closers named to the NCBWA Stopper of the Year watch list, tallied a team-leading 13 saves in 31 appearances last year with a 3.22 ERA. Jones feels Latham has great location and control, characteristics essential for being an elite closer.

"He's a consistent strike-thrower who throws high 80s and low 90s with a good breaking ball," Jones said. "He throws the ball down in the zone, so when he's on, he's going to get you a lot of put-outs if you play defense behind him."

One of the newcomers on the staff, Walker, will be asked to be the Green Wave's primary setup man. The senior transfer from Duke sat out last season but appeared in 17 games his junior year, posting a 3.23 ERA in 30.2 innings of relief.

"Blake Walker is a young man who really pitched well at Duke," Jones said. "He played three years at Duke. He did not play his senior year because he knew he was going to get his masters, so he wanted to have a year where he could go play in a program

After establishing himself as the everyday centerfielder last season, Southard never looked back. He led the team, and Conference USA, in runs scored (80), led the team in total bases (157), and racked up 16 stolen bases at the top of one of the most dominant lineups in college baseball.

Coach ready for exciting post-Katrina season

Benny Powell

Coming off of a season that started in excitement, ranked Baseball America's No. 1 preseason team, but ended in tears with a devastating loss in the College World Series, the Green Wave came in to the 2006 season looking to rebuild. Still, the adversity did not end last summer in Omaha. Tulane enters the season with an unplayable stadium due to Hurricane Katrina.

The Hullabaloo recently spoke with head coach Rick Jones about rebuilding, and getting back to Omaha. Hullabaloo: How does the team view practicing and playing at Zephyr Field this year? Rick Jones: I think it's a great alternative to Turchin (Stadium) when you don't have the ability to play there. We've played 33 hall games there since it has been open. We've won two Conference USA tournament championships there. We've won a Super Regional to go to our first College World Series. So, it's not a place that's foreign to our players, it's a great venue. When you consider the circumstances, it's a great option. H: How would you describe the team's mood during the initial days of practice, coming off the heartbreaking loss in the College World Series? RJ: That was a heartbreaking loss, but to have a heartbreaking loss in the College World Series, you have to be in the College World Series. With the exception of not winning the National Championship, it's probably as good of a year that you can hope to have. H: So the team is moving forward? RJ: It's all new, and it's exciting starting new. When you lose as many players as we did off of last year's club, then you are obviously going to have a younger, less-experienced team the next year. But, the good news is this club is talented. It's young, and it bodes well for the future. To be good every year, is not easy to do, and this year is sort of a transition year for us.

H: How was recruiting affected by the hurricane?

RJ: We couldn't off-set CNN. I'm sitting there telling [a prospective player] how it was going to be a great city, and they are seeing tape from CNN, that's three weeks earlier ... with buildings still under water, even though at that time the city was no longer under water. Those things were hard to fight.

H: How do you feel about the team's No. 12 ranking in Baseball America?

RJ: It's probably valid. There are only two rankings a year that mean anything. The first one and the last one, the first one because it generates interest in your program, and sells tickets, and builds momentum, the last one because it tells you what you did. If you are ranked every year in the top 15-20 in the

Sobering news for Greek life

Kim Borneman
news co-editor

A moratorium on all fraternity and sorority events involving alcohol was announced Tuesday in an effort to educate the community in risk management. This is a result of risky behaviors demonstrated by students, both Greek and non-Greek.

According to a memo released by Kevin Bailey, assistant vice president for student affairs and chief judicial officer, a Greek event is any event that could be construed as a chapter function on campus, on the grounds of the chapter house, or anywhere members congregate scheduled.

"Several people within the university community and especially those who work directly with the students and in particular the Greeks are concerned about student behaviors and safety," Jacob Bolin, director of fraternity and sorority programs, said. "That goes beyond overdrinking, that's drug use, that's poor decisions in regard to their sexual behavior."

The administration has left it up to the Inter-fraternity Council and the Pan-Hellenic Council to determine exactly what program will be implemented to educate students. Once this program has been completed, the moratorium will be lifted.

"It's all about trust and building relationships, about action with the students and start[ing] a dialogue about what they like and don't like about Greek life," Bailey said.

Leaders of the Greek community agree.

"Today we met to create a proposal, and tonight it will be sent to the administration. Regardless of how many people have gone to the hospital, people just aren't being responsible, Greek or non-Greek. We need to make sure that we are acting appropriately, which will effect everyone else as well," Morgan Simpson, IFC president said.

The proposal presented by the IFC involves five representatives from each chapter receiving training in five risk-related areas: drinking and drugs, responsible host training, hazing, sexuality, and community development. These representatives are then responsible for educating

"What we're looking for is if it takes a year to do it or a week do do it to get these educational components to be installed in the organizations, in the chapters and particularly in the members."

Students sent an unusual Valentine's Day gift to President Scott Cowen and the Newcomb/Tulane Task Force this Tuesday. As the university board members that compose the task force met in Gibson Hall, hundreds of students paraded around the building for the Imagine Protest. They carried signs reading, "Dump Cowen Not Engineering" and chanted, "Next time, you'll be sorry." Students also lined up to sign petitions.

Despite the frustration and anger that manifested, the event was peaceful and almost therapeutic. Undergraduates, graduates and professors joined to force their voice on an administration that they claimed has ignored them. Rally leaders attacked the administration's renewal plan for refusing student input and cutting them out of Tulane.

"We actually do care; we're not an apathetic student body," Olivia Watkins, Newcomb senior, shouted over the crowd. "We have until March 15 to make a difference."

On that day, the Newcomb/Tulane task force will make its decision regarding the future or perhaps more likely dissolution of the two colleges. Students, however, have demonstrated they will not watch passively as Tulane changes around them.

Originally, the Imagine Protest was to be a Newcomb sponsored class walkout. Leaders of the Newcomb, Tulane, Architecture and Engineering schools realized, however, that the whole student body needed to express its anger and demands.

"Since I've been here, the student voice has been squashed more and more every year," said Lewis Lowe, Tulane College Senate President and one of the major organizers of the Imagine Protest. Leaders from all four colleges decided a walk-

Tulane students perform at Howlin' Wolf on Saturday night

Rebuilding Fundraising Drive, the Tulane University athletic department held a benefit concert at The Howlin' Wolf on Saturday night.

The event featured three Tulane bands as well as the Rebirth Brass Band. Tickets were $10 for students and suggested donation of $15 for adults. More than $1,200 was raised for use by the athletic department.

Betsy Koban, a senior finance major of the Tulane Business School, organized the event with the help of Travis Goff, director of development in the athletic department, and Stewart Schayot from The Howlin' Wolf.

Koban, an avid sports fan, enjoyed watching Tulane football while she attended the University of Colorado at Boulder last semester. She came up with the idea of the concert as a "thank you" to Tulane and an appreciation for sports.

"Sports were the cement that kept us together," Koban said, referring to last semester. "Football and sports were the only way to be united. Wherever I was watching a football game I knew that 8,000 other students were doing the same thing."

A crowd of several hundred packed The Howlin' Wolf, including members of the athletic department and students.

"The concert brought a different type of crowd than the typical crowd for athletic events, a whole new type of student," Koban said. "I'm so thankful and appreciative for everyone that came out."

The atmosphere of the concert was very relaxed as Caloosa and Jason Greenwood, both Tulane bands, opened the show. Rebirth Brass Band then took the stage playing classic New Orleans songs. The Zoo, a Tulane band, finished the night. The concert helped promote Tulane bands as well as the athletic department.

"Rebirth has the greatest music ever," The Zoo's bass player Ari Michaeli said. "It's totally New Orleans."

Having Rebirth play at the event had special significance for Michaeli.

"When I think of New Orleans

three bands come to mind, and Rebirth is one of them," Michaeli said.

The event's organizers felt like their work paid off.

"[It was] absolutely a success," said Travis Goff, external affairs officer of the athletic department. "Definitely a great crowd. Everyone had a good time."

"I was glad to see people just as pumped up as I was," Koban said. "It was good to see people appreciate the work you put into something."

The concert was only the beginning of fund-raising for Tulane athletics.

"We are just embarking on the Hurricane Rebuilding Fundraising Drive," Goff said.

No. 3 Memphis comes to Fogelman

Jason Lieser
sports editor

The Green Wave men's basketball team will take on its highest-ranked opponent of the season tomorrow when it hosts No. 3 Memphis at 7 p.m.

"They are as athletic of a team as I have seen in the last five years," Tulane head coach Dave Dickerson said. "We will have to be prepared for their strengths in order to win the game. They are an outstanding rebounding team, and they pressure you for 40 minutes offensively and defensively."

As a former assistant coach for Maryland, Dickerson is no stranger to big games against ranked teams.

"We can be successful because of the enthusiasm of our crowd," he said. "The students have been great all year, and with only two home games left, we need them all there. They can give us a major edge on Saturday."

The Tigers (23-2 overall, 9-0 in Conference USA) received one first-place vote in the ESPN/USA Today coach's poll, and its only losses have come at the hands of No. 2 Duke and No. 6 Texas.

Barring a major upset, Memphis is cruising toward a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament next month.

Dickerson believes there is an equation for his team producing that upset.

"The recipe for the upset is team rebounding and taking care of the basketball," he said.

"If we can win those two areas, we will have a chance at winning."

Memphis boasts at least three players expected to hit the NBA as early as next season: senior Rodney Carney (team-best 18.0 points per game), sophomore Darius Washington, Jr. (14.0 points and 3.8 assists per game) and freshman Shawne Williams (13.1 points and 6.3 rebounds per game).

Also, Saturday's game will

likely be the last regular season contest for most Tulane students to attend, with the final home game coming March 1 – during spring break.

As if that is not enough to entice students to come out to Fogelman Arena, the athletic department has a slew of promotions including the guaranteed giveaway of a scooter from Big Easy Scooters as a reward for a paper airplane-throwing contest. There will also be various restaurant and hotel prizes given away throughout the night.

Wall Residential College will be throwing a pre-game party at its hall at 4:30 p.m., while the A.B. Freeman School of Business is sponsoring pre-game festivities outside the arena at 5 p.m.

Another losing season

staff writer

Two consecutive road losses this week guaranteed that the Tulane men's basketball squad will finish the regular season with a losing record, its third straight.

Following a 72-51 loss at UCF on Saturday night, the upset-minded Green Wave (9-14, 4-6 C-USA) traveled to Birmingham on Wednesday to take on UAB (18-5, 8-2 C-USA).

After trailing at one point by 14, the Green Wave battled to within two points at 82-80 with less than one minute to go. With possession of the ball and a chance to tie the game, Blazer Paul Delaney stole the ball, leading to a three-pointer by New Orleans native Squeaky Johnson that sealed the victory.

"I am proud of our effort," Tulane head coach Dave Dickerson said. "We played hard for 40 minutes against one of the best teams in the country. We thought their style could help our offensive production, and it did, [but] just not enough."

Tulane's leader Quincy Davis scored 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in the game.

His fourth point of the night gave Davis 1,000 points in his Tulane career, the 28th Greenie to accomplish that plateau. He is the 14th player in Tulane history with 1,000 points and 500 rebounds.

The Green Wave can finish at best 13-14 in the regular season if it wins its last four games. Tulane currently holds the eighth spot in C-USA standings and would likely have to win the conference tournament to earn a berth in the NCAA Tournament.

Memphis, ranked No. 3 in the nation, visits Fogelman Arena tomorrow at 7 p.m. The Tigers (23-2, 9-0 in C-USA) have only lost to Duke and Texas this season.

Everett hit an RBI single to tie the game. That would be all the for Green Wave offense, which could not figure out reliever Shawn Ferguson (1-0) gave up just one hit in 2 2/3 innings.

After toppling Texas Tech, the Green Wave was led by senior right-hander Billy Mohl (1-0), who shut down the Longhorns offense at Minute Made Park in Houston. The two teams played in front of an announced crowd of over 27,000.

"It's nice playing in a big league ballpark," junior infielder Mark Hamilton said. "A lot of us grew up around Houston, so those of us who hadn't played there have seen a lot of Astros games at Minute Maid growing up."

Mohl pitched seven innings, allowing just six baserunners while striking out five against the Longhorns who were ranked No. 1 heading into the season. Latham pitched a perfect final two innings for his first save of the season in a game dominated by pitching.

"It was really pitching and defense against the Longhorns," Jones said. "It'll be a good RPI win for us."

Jones wasn't ready to celebrate just yet, though.

"You don't read into scores too much in the first part of the season because you're still trying to find out what you have," he said.

Still, averaging last year's College World Series loss to the Longhorns was on the players' minds.

"It always feels good to beat Texas," Hamilton said. "So many of us are from Texas and it's nice to get that revenge after last year."

Saturday after dropping the season opener to TCU 5-3 the night before.

The Green Wave took TCU into extra innings, thanks in part to a strong effort by junior starter Brandon Gomes. Gomes pitched 6 1/3 innings and did not allow an earned run with while striking out four.

Junior Daniel Latham (0-1) took the loss after giving up three runs in three innings of work out of the bullpen as the Horned Frogs won the game in the tenth inning.

Red-shirt freshman starting pitcher Stephen Porlier and the Green Wave greeted the home fans in style Tuesday night with a 5-3 win over McNeese St. Porlier (1-0) shined in his first career Green Wave start, throwing seven shutout innings.

"It felt good to play in front of the home crowd and show their support," sophomore starting pitcher Sean Morgan said. "It's nice to see people come out and give us the time of day coming off the big win against Texas."

Porlier allowed just four hits and a walk while striking out three. He hadn't started since high school, when he suffered an elbow injury and had to undergo Tommy John surgery.

The Green Wave received major offensive contributions from sophomore Brad Emaus and freshman Aja Barto. Emaus went 3-4 with an RBI and Barto hit his first career home run at Tulane. His two-run shot in the fifth highlighted a four-run inning for Tulane. Emaus added an RBI, single in the inning.

The team has jumped out to a strong start despite being inexperienced at several positions. Jones has been impressed with his new starters so far.

"Nate Simon has had some good at bats for us, Johnny Weiss is playing solid at third," Jones said. "Max Kwan is catching very well and having good at bats. Those guys, along with our pitchers are doing the job for us so far."

The Green Wave hosts Penn State for a three-game series beginning tonight at Zephyr Field (7 p.m.).

The uncertain future of Tulane athletics

Lewis Lowe
staff writer

Many things upset me about Tulane's Renewal Plan.

The loss of key departments, the merging of our unique coordinate college system, the complete lack of student involvement and the hypocrisy in mission versus departmental cuts all come to mind.

However, I have come to accept the changes laid out in the renewal plan as permanent, and I am moving on. Why fight something that is not going to change? Like everyone should, I am now working to retain what I can from the Tulane I applied to and will graduate from in May.

I keep coming back to one aspect of the renewal plan that has seemingly been brushed under the proverbial rug: the loss of eight athletic teams.

Is athletics really that important when dealing with a situation such as ours? When we are cutting entire schools, is there even a question of keeping athletics around? Well, Tulane did keep some of the "major" sports but cut others. We are now eight teams shy of the minimum 16 required for participation in Division-I NCAA athletics. We have a five-year exemption from this requirement, but what happens in five years?

My initial feelings were of anger. As a friend of mine called the situation "Carrying the torch to get burned," referring to President Scott Cowen's declaration that student athletes would carry the torch for Tulane University last fall. Many did, only to find out that in the renewed Tulane, there would not be a spot for tennis, golf, swimming, soccer and men's cross country and track.

Sadly, these were some of our most successful teams.

The decisions rendered Dec. 8 forecast a very murky future for Tulane athletics. Of course, this should come as no surprise to those familiar with Tulane athletics. Most of the undergraduates were not around for the last major threat to athletics at Tulane.

When I was a freshman, Tulane seriously considered eliminating football or moving down to a lower division. Luckily for sports fans, Tulane decided against these plans, and Cowen campaigned for fairness and parity in Division I athletics.

Thus, it came as no surprise to me that Tulane scrutinized athletics in the broad and far-reaching renewal plan.

I offer no solution to the athletics problem. There are way too many sides of the issue, and we are first and foremost a university focused on enhancing its academic standing. However, the athletics cuts bring up interesting issues about collegiate athletics. For example, why is there a minimum sports requirement for intercollegiate athletics?

For schools like Tulane, which typically loses money on athletics, why sponsor 16 teams, most of which drain money from the school?

Don't get me wrong. I like the sports that are implicated in the cuts and ultimately think they should exist at Tulane and all schools. But why are they required?

One argument is that it allows students who would otherwise not be able to attend college a chance to do so. That is certainly true for sports like football and basketball, but can you really make that argument about country club sports like tennis and golf? It is an interesting question, and one for which I do not have an answer.

Perhaps Cowen will make this one of his many banner issues and start a crusade about the hindrances faced by programs like Tulane under NCAA requirements.

In the next few years, the only thing certain about Tulane athletics is that changes will have to be made. At eight teams, we cannot even compete at non-scholarship Division III. If we want to remain Division I, there will be a lot of teams starting from scratch.

Furthermore, until a decision is made, I cannot imagine that Tulane recruiters will have much success trying to attract top-tier student athletes to a school that they could very well be forced to transfer from a year after they were recruited. These are most definitely sad times for Tulane athletics.

That being said, the changes in athletics are about the only aspects of the renewal plan that are not set in stone. So make your voices heard, on either side of the issue.

This is something that has to be revisited in the very near future, and I am sure that students will, at least in some small degree, factor into the decision.

Indians display Carnival flair

AJ Jambhekar and Iris Vance contributing writers

A Mardi Gras Indian performs a traditional dance in front of McAlister Auditorium.

In the spirit of Mardi Gras, tribesmen from Wild Tchoupitoulas, Golden Comanches and Mohawk Hunters tribes gave Tulane University students a traditional Indian performance Wednesday on the steps of McAlister Auditorium.

Five men danced and sang in enormous colorful feather headdresses bejeweled with glass and adorned with elaborate beaded images of Indians on horseback, owls, wolves and eagles.

Their vocalizations were rich and captivating as they performed traditional call-and-response songs. Students and staff joined in, taking turns dancing with yellow feathers.

After the presentation, the Mardi Gras Indians shared their culture and history. The tradition dates back to the first Indian-assisted African American escape in 1725. Indian tribes such as the Choctaw, Chickasaw and Seminoles helped African Americans escape from slavery and learn to live off the land.

Big Chief Rod Sylvas of the Wild Tchoupitoulas tribe applauded the underground railroad network and explained the fundamental kinship between the two groups.

"Since [the African Americans of the Indian tribes] had similar traditions — being tribal — they really understood freedom," he said.

Since then, African Americans have paid respect to their Indian friends in the West African tradition of emulating one another's costumes at important events.

But the Mardi Gras Indians' history is more than an expression of friendship.

According to Peter Davis, the vice president for Black Arts at Tulane University, the Indians represent "fighting for what's yours." He said the Indians are a "reflection of history."

The Mardi Gras Indians have long been associated with a history of violence. In the early part of the 1900s, shooting, stabbing and hatchet attacks were the manifestations of resentment between various tribes. In the 1940s, this competitive spirit began to transform into a show-down of costume and performance.

The Mardi Gras Indians costume themselves in a style that blends Plains Indian aesthetics with traditional African sensibilities. Costumes are made from ostrich feathers, sequins, rhinestones, glass jewels and the elaborate, labor-intensive beadwork emblematic of the Mardi Gras Indians.

These costumes often weigh more than a hundred pounds and can cost from $18,000 to $57,000 to make. After thousands of hours of intense craftsmanship, these pieces of living artwork are worn only once.

"If you ain't dedicated and motivated to do this, you ain't gonna look like this," Big Chief Wallace Pardo of the Golden Comanches said.

Erica Healen

Rarely at Tulane University do students rally around a single cause. Lately however, changes on campus have led to student action and the rising concern for student-administration communication.

Students gathered on Newcomb quad last week to raise their voices against a bevy of perceived wrongs committed by the administration at Tulane. The issues included some of the key points of the controversial Renewal Plan, a package deal to which no student or faculty member contributed.

The release of the plan raised controversy. Students and faculty claim they should have been consulted before the changes were made.

"Katrina is a convenient excuse," Lindsey Cantwell, a Newcomb College junior, said. "But this [unresponsiveness] existed well before the hurricane. Campus is a miserable place to be. There are no chairs, no food, no place to be on campus since they tore down the University Center."

The Renewal Plan has fanned the flames of discontent with unpopular changes such as the dissolution of Newcomb and Tulane colleges and all but two engineering programs.

The description of the Renewal Plan includes concerns of academic ascendancy, financial stability and reputation. This has led many Tulane students to believe that the heart of the university does not reside with its student body, but with its bank account.

"Tulane is a business, and we are just clients," Cantwell said.

Tulane Vice President and Chief of Staff Anne Baños does not understand this financial mindset. "Many administrators are Tulane graduates," she said. "Our investment here is personal and emotional."

"The administration and [President] Cowen have been extremely transparent and willing to talk about the [Renewal Plan] situation," she added.

University Student Government President Peter Young and Associated Student Body President Arman Sadeghpour both agree the way the students were notified of the plan was wrong.

New levee system to secure New Orleans

Christina Le
news editor

After weeks of deliberation and dispute, Louisiana government officials have finally passed two bills that will consolidate local levee boards into one overarching authority.

Senate Bills 8 and 9, written by Sen. Walter Boasso, R-Arabi, and supported by Governor Kathleen Blanco, will create the Southeast Louisiana Flood Protection Authority, which will oversee eight parishes and replace the individual boards.

"Katrina taught us that a patchwork of disjointed levee boards does not work for Louisiana," Blanco said in committee testimony.

It is hoped the consolidation of the boards will improve efficiency of management and levee projects and lean more toward flood protection. Blanco also believes the authority will secure federal dollars by showing that the state will spend it wisely.

"If we don't do this right, Congress will send this money to other states," Blanco said.

The consolidated board should also eliminate opportunities for patronage.

The board must abide by strict ethics rules. They are restricted from political campaigns, lobbying and doing business with groups that may cause conflicts of interests.

The governor will make board appointments with approval from the Senate. However, nominations to the board will be made by engineers and public interest groups, which will limit the number of candidates the governor may choose from.

The plan calls for the majority of board members to have backgrounds in engineering, hydrology or other fields related to water control. Several members of the board must come from outside the Southeast Louisiana area and may be from out of state.

The new levee authority will be separated into two collaborating sections: East and West.

The East authority will reach from St. Bernard to St. John the Baptist parishes on the East Bank and include the areas below Interstate 12 in St. Tammany and Tangipahoa parishes on the North Shore. It will control flood issues in the Ponchartrain Basin.

The West authority will oversee Orleans and Jefferson parishes on the West Bank of the Mississippi River and face flood issues in the Barataria Basin.

The levee-taxing districts will remain the same, however, their flood protection authorities will be unified.

The new system will also change the levee law enforcement. Special levee police forces will be dissolved and will be replaced by local sheriffs or police departments.

The bill originally did not separate the East and West riverbanks. It was therefore stalled in the Senate and rewritten. Blanco and Boasso reshaped their plan in time for a 12-day special session devoted to storm recovery in the House of Representatives, which voted for the bills almost unanimously, 98-3 on Senate Bill 8 and 99-0 for the companion constitutional amendment of Senate Bill 9.

Opponents of the bill are concerned over the taxing situation and wish to discuss it further.

"We're entering something new in the world of politics in Louisiana," Boasso said. "The future of our state is going to depend on changes like this."

Wave Rolls Over Penn St. in Sweep

Junior Matt Fockel pitched a no-hitter in the eighth inning of the 9-3 finale to sweep Penn State.

Ben Eisenberg
staff writer

It's early in the season, but so far it looks as though the Green Wave hasn't lost a step following last year's College World Series run. Dominant starting pitching and an explosive offense led to an impressive three-game sweep of Penn State at Zephyr Field last weekend.

Tulane outscored Penn State by a 30-7 margin, tallying at least nine runs in each win. Friday night, they pulled away early with a five-run third inning en route to a 9-4 win. Sophomore right-hander Sean Morgan struck out 11 on Saturday to lead the team to a 12-0 blowout, and senior starting pitcher Billy Mohl looked strong as the Wave took Sunday's series finale 9-3.

The Green Wave continued to get strong pitching from their starters, beginning with junior Brandon Gomes. Gomes (1-0) picked up his first win and allowed only two earned runs in six strong innings, striking out five along the way. By the time he exited the game, the offense had built an 8-2 cushion.

"We pitched well all weekend," head coach Rick Jones said. "We also started to show some signs of consistency offensively."

Sophomores Warren McFadden and Brad Emaus each contributed three RBIs to the effort, shorted.

Emaus, who belted a two-run home run in the third, continued his torrid pace after being named Conference USA player of the week. Emaus went 5-12 over the three-game stand.

The lineup again put up big numbers Saturday, not that the Morgan (1-0) needed the help. In six innings of work, the right-hander allowed just four hits and a walk while striking out a career-high 11 batters.

Morgan, who has had occasional control issues, often started ahead in the count and walked only one.

"I've been getting the first pitch over for a strike," Morgan said. "I'm relaxing a lot more, and trusting my defense. It also helps when your offense gives you eight runs to work with."

Around this time last year, head coach Lisa Stockton's team suffered consecutive losses to Louisville and Cincinnati, leaving Tulane on the outside looking in for a conference tournament bid the first time in Stockton's tenure.

But this year, despite having a younger team, the only thing Stockton is worried about is what seed the team will be given after improving to 7-7 in conference play (13-10 overall) over the weekend with two road games remaining before the tournament. The Green Wave swept its final home stand of the with a 58-40 win over Marshall Friday and a thrilling 81-78 overtime win over East Carolina on Sunday.

"With these two wins, I think we've put ourselves in position to finish in the top half of the conference," Stockton said. "I think our focus should be on trying to win at least one, maybe both of these final road games. We've played well on the road this year, and I think we need to continue that."

Sophomore Nikki Luckhurst nailed a jumper to break a 75-75 tie with 26 seconds left in overtime Sunday and then hit a pair of crucial free throws to seal the win over the Pirates.

Luckhurst scored all 18 of her points in the second half and in overtime while freshman Ashley Langford, who found Luckhurst for the go-ahead bucket, set a school record with 13 assists. Langford now has 130 assists on the season and is still on pace to break the Tulane single-season assist record.

After Luckhurst's bucket, the Pirates had a chance to tie, but junior Jami Montagnino drew a charge with 15 seconds remaining before Luckhurst and sophomore Jennifer Sands nailed four consecutive free throws. Montagnino led all scorers with 20 points and Sands added 17 of her own as the Green Wave had one of its best offensive outputs of the season against a scrappy East Carolina team.

"I thought for the most part we were on fire offensively," Stockton said. "We had to match their intensity."

One of the most interesting dynamics I've observed in my five years of covering various levels of sports is the abundance of talking connected with a scarcity of thinking.

There are situations on football fields, in basketball locker rooms and at post-game press conferences where I go back to listen to my tape recorder and I just can't believe what I'm hearing.

A couple years ago, Baron Davis answered one of my questions by saying something about Osama bin Laden. Ozzie Guillen told me last year that he would help one of his players cheat if they wanted to. Jalen Rose said that playing in Toronto was almost like playing in another country.

A high school football coach in western Louisiana said of his 16-year-old quarterback, knowing full-well he was on the record, "He's a 140-pound sophomore who's 5-foot-6; he really shouldn't be out there, but he's the best thing we have to go to. If there was something we could do about that we would."

My latest duncie is Memphis head coach John Calipari. Calipari is in his 14th year as a collegiate head coach and clearly the premier head coach of Conference USA, which he certainly believes makes him an expert.

So I figured, let's have the good doctor diagnose our little program here at Tulane, which has a collective record of 69-101 since last making the NIT in 2000. Calipari: "[Tulane] needs a new stadium. They've got to step up."

"I'll give you an example: Central Florida wants to win in football; now make the same commitment to basketball. Rice wanted to win in baseball. I saw their baseball stadium; it's unbelievable. Then they win the College World Series. Well, do the same in basketball."

Interesting. Got any of your famous one-liners for me to print alongside that quote? "Administrations win championships; basketball coaches win ballgames," Calipari philosophized.

I think administrations also run the university and try to enhance its academic prestige too, but maybe that's just me.

All of this expertise, by the way, comes without one single moment of hesitation. Not one pause to think about any external factors, large or small.

Still, an interesting idea I guess. A new Fogelman Arena — sounds nice. I bet Tulane head coach Dave Dickerson would agree with that.

"We've had some setbacks with our school," Dickerson said when presented with Calipari's thesis.

Huh? Setbacks? Me no understand. I can't think of any setba — ah, you mean that

Wave Black and Blued by 40

Residing in the city known as the birthplace of jazz, the Green Wave walked off of the floor of Fogelman Arena feeling the blues of Memphis last Saturday night, as the No. 3 Tigers defeated Tulane 105-65.

Leading up to Saturday's loss before a reported crowd of 2,582, the Green Wave 9-15 (4-7 C-USA) came off a two game losing streak at Conference USA foes UAB and UCF. The Tigers, who lost by one point last season in the C-USA championship game, won 12 straight and, at 24-2 (10-0), only lost to Texas and by three to Duke all season.

"We got beat by a better team tonight, they were really good, they have a good coach, great players and they played great tonight and we didn't," Dickerson said. "It was very disappointing to lose the way we lost because I know deep down in my heart we are a better team than we showed tonight."

After taking a 9-7 on a Darius Washington Jr. lay up with 16:36 to play in the first half, the Tigers did not let up, going on a 15-2 run to push the score to 24-9. Memphis was able to keep the difference to at least 11 points for the remainder of the opening half.

Forward Donnie Stith and the Green Wave fought the Tiger full-court press in 105-65 loss.

"Defensively, we just didn't get the job done," center Quincy Davis said. "It just didn't look like us out there tonight. We didn't come out with what we needed to compete tonight."

With the score 53-33 at the half, the Green Wave shot 13-23 (56.5) from the field to the Tigers 21-38

(55.3) performance; 20 of the Tigers first-half points came from turnovers. Tulane gave away possession 12 times, including nine steals by the Tigers in the opening 20 minutes.

RTA gives rides to N.O. residents

The St. Charles Streetcar will no run until 2007

LEE SAXON/PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR

Drew Johnson
contributing writer

A significant piece of New Orleans culture is the network of streetcars that patrol around the garden district and downtown. But along with almost every other service of post-Katrina New Orleans, the network is undergoing much change. Several streetcar routes are currently not in service, most notably the St. Charles line.

The streetcar network is managed by the New Orleans Regional Transit Authority. Katrina has been very hard on the organization, specifically because of the need for public transportation around the city. Not only responsible for the streetcars, RTA must maintain the system of public buses around the city as well.

In the past, the streetcars have served as a cheap and efficient mode of transportation for the working class of New Orleans. But while the majority of the streetcars lines are still not operational, other transit agencies have donated buses to assist with the current problems with public transportation.

The RTA, with support from FEMA, has eliminated all bus fares for students and citizens of New Orleans within Orleans Parish up until June 30 of this year, essentially meaning all resident Tulane students have free access to downtown on the bus system. This is specifically helpful considering the only streetcar lines currently operating are St. Charles on the Riverfront and Canal St. from the French Market stop on Esplanade to Prozac St. The temporary buses are running along the exact same route the St. Charles streetcar had previously, and the wait for boarding is usually around five to ten minutes.

The implementation of extra bus loops has been quite effective thus far. The RTA buses are currently averaging 4500-5000 rides per day, and the increasing numbers show no signs of decreasing, though still down from pre-Katrina due to the discrepancy in returning New Orleanians.

Don't expect the St. Charles line to be up and running any time soon, though. The task of restoring the line is a daunting one, and will cost anywhere from $10 to 12 million dollars. The RTA estimates that the streetcars will not be properly functioning until the second half of 2007, while most other lines should be ready by the end of this calendar year. The central problem concerning the St. Charles line, the one most frequented by Tulane and Loyola Students, comes from a lack of power, not a lack of cars. The St. Charles streetcars survived the storm with little to no damage, while cars from other areas like Canal St. waited in standing water for over two weeks after the hurricane. The cost for rehabilitating the interior and exterior of each car looks to be around a million each.

On a more positive note, a portable energy substation donated by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority will help to power damaged lines. As previously mentioned, other transit agencies have been very compassionate and generous in aiding an organization that has never had to deal with such a large task of repair.

The RTA is also negotiating a contract with FEMA and the Brookville Mining Company, which specializes in manufacturing mining equipment, but also deal with mass transit. Their aim is simply to develop

N.O. changes face

The New Orleans population has reached only about one third of its pre-Katrina number, yet many who now work and live in the city are not locals.

Before the hurricane New Orleans boasted one of the largest minority populations in the United States. The 2000 Census placed the African-American population at 66.6% of the total, followed by 26.6% white, 3.1% Hispanic, and 2.3% Asian.

Reconstruction efforts have not brought back equal numbers in 2006. The U.S. Secretary for Housing and Urban Development reports that only 35-40% of the African-American population has returned. While Mayor Ray Nagin insists the demographics of New Orleans will once again return to pre-Katrina status, the results are yet to be seen.

The effects of Hurricane Katrina were disproportionate to the racial distribution of the population. A study by the Domestic Policy Division and the Congressional Cartography Program from the Library of Congress states that while there were 484,674 people living in Orleans Parish pre-Katrina, an estimated 272,000 of the affected were African-American residents.

Even more, a local study reports that "among the blacks living in Orleans Parish who were displaced by the storm, over one-third ... were estimated to have been poor...compared to 14.6 percent of non-blacks." It is unreasonable to expect that those blacks of lower economic status forced to leave will be among those soon to return.

However, many of those who are returning to the city are Hispanic. An article from nola.com noted that 60 to 70 percent of the "original Hispanic population of the New Orleans area has returned." But local Hispanic residents aren't the only ones coming back. In recent months, the Gulf Coast Latin American Association reported that 30,000 Latinos have moved into the area since the storm. Most of those coming into the city have come to participate in the continual construction work throughout the region.

The question has now become not only who will come back, but who will stay. As the city's reconstruction is occurring slowly, it is realistic to expect that a substantial amount of those new residents who have come for work will stay, particularly those within the Hispanic population.

Dr. Carl Bankston, a professor of Sociology at Tulane University, insists that "we can expect that some of those who have arrived as temporary workers will remain." However, he continued, "I do not think that the largest growth in the Latino population will be in New Orleans itself...I think that we can expect that even most of those working in Orleans Parish will settle outside the city itself." That was the case in areas in Florida after Hurricane Andrew caused unprecedented damage and required massive amounts of labor to rebuild.

Now New Orleans must face the repercussions from the storm. The shifts in demographics will be a continuing factor in the city's development and progression. Along with the changing face of the city come concerns of heightened racial tension and a loss of black culture, and with changes there will undoubtedly be tension. But Dr. Bankston concludes that there is no easy answer. "I think [race relations] is a serious social problem, but one without an immediately obvious solution. The association of race and poverty, created by a long and continuing history of both intentional and institutional discrimination, has been a major factor in perpetuating de facto racial segregation."

It will be years, maybe even decades, before New Orleans completes the healing process, both in population restoration and race relations. As the city is rebuilt, residents and the country will have the chance to see how New Orleans residents deal with change.

City repairs roads

Emily Hohenwarter

Traffic conditions around campus are causing many students to complain. Broadway is littered with potholes, and most traffic lights are not working properly. According to a conditions report released by the City of New Orleans, 95% of roads in our area have been inspected, and only 39% of signals are operational after Hurricane Katrina.

Currently, only 19 contracted workers are repairing signals in the entire city. As of Mar. 6, Allen Yrle, the city's senior traffic engineer, said that most lights along Carrollton and Claiborne Avenues should be operational, but many more are still out.

Signal repairs throughout the city are expected to cost about $25 million all together.

Originally, the City of New Orleans assumed sole responsibility for repairing its traffic signals, but a lack of funds and workers required that the city turn the responsibility of repair over to the state in October.

The complexity of New Orleans' signal system as well as the sheer amount of damage done to the city means that it will take time and outside contractors to finish the repairs, state traffic engineer Steve Glascock said. Glascock urged frustrated motorists to be patient.

"This is a city-wide problem. City officials are not coming to our area and maintaining road signs," said Captain Jack LeBlanc, the officer in charge of traffic at Tulane University Department of Public Safety.

Road sign vandalism is also a problem on campus, and TUDPS officials have taken over the job of maintaining street signs on roads through campus. TUDPS has tried to place campus stop signs in secure, high places where they cannot be taken.

Tulane falls in 2nd round

After defeating Marshall in the opening round of the men's Conference USA basketball tournament Wednesday, the Green Wave fell 75-56 to No. 5 Memphis Thursday.

"I'm proud of this team," head coach Dave Dickerson said. "We showed resiliency in our effort and our belief. These players were loyal to the school to the city and most importantly as a first year head coach to me."

Memphis ran out to a 13-2 lead to start the game on their way to building a 47-19 halftime advantage.

The Green Wave shot 8-26, 30.8 percent from the field in the first half and allowed the Tigers to convert seven three-pointers.

The Wave would go on to commit 27 turnovers, while the Tigers recorded 13 steals including four from guard Antonio Anderson.

Tulane's guard Chris Moore posted a game-leading 21 points and nine rebounds, followed by 19 from Quincy Davis.

In the regular season contest between Tulane and Marshall, the Green Wave had the upper hand, defeating the Thundering Herd 61-36 on Feb. 4 at Fogelman Arena. In Memphis, the teams would seesaw the advantage until the Green Wave's front-court carried the load, and back court sealed the 64-58 victory with late free throws.

"This is a great win for our program, especially considering the fact that we didn't play particularly well in the first half," Dickerson said. "We made some uncharacteristic mistakes, and we just didn't play with the energy it takes to win games in March, but we made some adjustments at halftime."

A tip-in by Donnie Stith tied the game at 42, after the Green Wave went on a 10-5 scoring run to open the second half.

Mark Patton's three-pointer with 2:30 remaining tied the game at 56. Tulane would allow only two successful free throws, as the Herd went zero for eight from the field to close the game. The Green Wave converted six of eight free throws off of the Herd's intentions.

SMU outlasts Tulane

A rollercoaster season filled with adversity and record-breaking performances came to a heart-breaking end last Friday night. But as has been the case all season, the Green Wave didn't go down without a fight.

It took three overtimes before Tulane finally fell to SMU, 86-84 in the quarterfinals of Conference USA tournament. The Green Wave set a school record with 64 rebounds, but shot a dismal 28.4 percent on 27-of-95 shooting.

"We've shot the ball so well all year, and it's unlike us not to shoot the ball well," head coach Lisa Stockton said. "It was frustrating and certainly something very unlike our team, but if we hadn't rebounded so well, the game would have been so out of reach and that we wouldn't have been able to fight back in.

Junior Jami Montagnino carried the offense, scoring a career-high 35 points on nine-of-25 shooting from the field. The performance was the most scored by a Tulane player in over five years and was the tenth-best scoring performance in school history. For her efforts, Montagnino was named to the C-USA All-Tournament team.

"I thought it was a great example of Jami putting the team on her back and trying to extend the season," Stockton said. "I felt like the effort was there from everybody, but Jami did a nice job of scoring when we needed a score."

In the third overtime, sophomore Nikki Luckhurst hit a three pointer to give the Green Wave an 84-83 lead. But neither team hit a field goal

LSU wins first of series

Brad Emaus stepped to the plate Tuesday night trailing by one to in-state rival LSU with two on and two out in the Green Wave's final at-bat, with a chance to be a hero. His two-run homer in the third inning put Tulane in the lead in Baton Rouge, but his final at-bat, and the game, ended on a first pitch flyout to left field, giving LSU a 4-3 victory in the first matchup between the squads this season in front of 7,871 at Alex Box Stadium.

LSU (14-2) went ahead for good in the eighth inning with a sacrifice fly to center by left fielder Steven Waguespack, scoring center fielder Bruce Sprowl from third base. Sprowl had singled to lead off the inning against tiring Tulane starting pitching Brandon Gomes. Daniel Latham would replace Gomes after Sprowl was sacrificed to second. Sprowl advanced to third on an infield single and scored on the Waguespack sacrifice.

"You've got to give credit to Waguespack," Tulane head coach Rick Jones said. "He battled and battled, and when he finally got a pitch he could handle, he got it into the outfield."

Tulane (10-5) scored first with the Emaus home run in the third. They led until the sixth when back-to-back home runs by shortstop Michael Hollander and designated hitter J.T. Wise gave the Tigers a 3-2 lead.

Two LSU errors in the eighth allowed Tulane to tie the game at three. Emaus reached base on a one-out error by LSU third baseman Will Harris. He advanced to second when Tiger right fielder Quinn Stewart dropped Mark Hamilton's fly ball. Stewart juggled the ball and as his mitt grazed the ground, making the ball come loose. LSU Manager Smoke Laval argued to no avail, leaving the Wave with men at first and second with one out. Three pitches later, right fielder Warren McFadden's ground ball skipped over the glove of shortstop Hollander, scoring Emaus all the way from second base. The two runners were squandered by left fielder Matt Riser and third baseman Tim Guidry leaving the game tied, before the deciding bottom half of the inning.

Chase Dardar (2-0) earned the win for LSU, pitching an inning and two-thirds in relief of Louis Coleman. Gomes (1-2) took the loss for Tulane, surrendering four runs on eight hits while striking out four men over seven and a third.

The Green Wave left nine men on base and were only 1 for 12 with men in scoring position. "We're a little young and banged up," said Coach Jones. "That shows up more offensively, and that was the case again tonight."

Tulane opens a three-game series against Oral Roberts, tonight at 6:30 PM at Zephyr Field. The Golden Eagles (8-3), of Tulsa, Oklahoma, and a member of the Mid-Continent Conference, currently have a four game winning streak.

Bush, Clinton will speak at graduation

STEPHEN DAIGLE/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Former presidents Bush and Clinton will speak at this May's commencement in the New Orleans Arena.

Emily Brumfield
contributing writer

In contrast to last year's relatively unknown keynote speaker, commencement planners have announced two high-profile speakers for this year's keynote address. Former presidents George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton will deliver this year's address at the New Orleans Arena.

Clinton and Bush have joined forces in the past few years, first for raising funds for the Indian Ocean Tsunami Relief Fund and most recently for the Bush-Clinton Katrina Fund. The fund has donated over $30 million to higher education institutions since the storm in an effort to supplement government grants, with Tulane receiving over $14 million of those funds.

Last year's speaker, Michael Lewis, drew criticism from students about the speaker selection process. Students complained that speakers are not compensated for their appearance so Tulane could not attract "celebrity" speakers.

This year, Hurricane Katrina has assisted in attracting more famous speakers to Tulane. Graduating senior Shirell Morgan is excited about commencement, not only because she is receiving her diploma. "It's so wonderful that graduation will be a bigger event this year, after all we've been through to actually get these degrees," she said.

Because of such high profile speakers, graduating students are limited in the number of seats they can reserve at graduation. Each student is allowed seven tickets to the unified ceremony, one for himself and six for guests.

In previous years, when the ceremony took place at the spacious Superdome, students were allowed unlimited seating for guests. Now, with the smaller venue, larger graduating class and more security required for the former presidents, there is less space.

Former keynote speakers include Cokie Roberts, former Attorney General Janet Reno, William Safire, Tom Brokaw, presidential candidate Ralph Nader and former Ambassador Lindy Boggs.

Alums, students sue Tulane

Drew Dickson
main section editor

Six Tulane University alumnae and nine Newcomb students filed a lawsuit against the "Administrators of the Tulane Educational Fund" on Wednesday to prevent the university from dissolving Newcomb College and redistributing the endowment funds.

"Newcomb offer[s] women a chance to plan a successful future," Paige Gold, a 1977 Newcomb graduate and plaintiff in the lawsuit, said in a press release. "A Tulane without Newcomb may be a good school, but it will never be the first-class institution it once was."

The U.S. District Court will consider the motion for an injunction March 30. Federal court Judge J. Carl Barbier also ordered the university not to make any changes that could not be easily "undone in short order."

The plaintiffs allege the administration does not have the legal power to redirect Newcomb's $41 million endowment and related funds. They also reject the plan to restructure the liberal arts undergraduate schools into a unified Newcomb-Tulane College, while replacing Newcomb with a women's institute with only a $2 million endowment.

"Mrs. Newcomb and the Tulane Board intended for Newcomb College to be a separate college within Tulane University," the lawsuit says. "[The school was] to be maintained through her founding gift for the dual purpose of being an appropriate memorial and of educating and benefiting young women."

The plaintiffs say Tulane cannot break a contract just because it might improve the school.

The Newcomb Institute would offer classes in women's studies and other extra- and co-curricular programming to enhance a woman's education. However, the classes would not add up to a major, according to the lawsuit.

The proposal to do away with Newcomb College is a part of Tulane University President Scott Cowen's Renewal Plan, which the Board of Administrators approved December 8. He claims it is a vital instrument for the university's future as a smaller, more competitive post-Katrina institution.

Members of the board met with President Cowen yesterday to approve some of the measures designed to institute the changes.

The 120-year old Newcomb College is one of the nation's oldest women's colleges and the first established within an already existing university. The school was founded for the expressed purpose of granting degrees to women. Josephine Louise Newcomb made the initial donation in honor of her daughter, who died as teenager, to support a women's program by creating a school concurrent with the all-male Tulane College.

Many of the people fighting the change cite this tradition and historical significance as the reason for resistance.

"The fight for Newcomb is not just a financial issue; it's about tradition," said Jenny Comarda, a sophomore and Newcomb USG representative. "We have a responsibility to fight for everything we can and should be able to hold on to."

UC will cater to student needs

Approximately 14 students had the opportunity to participate in a walk-through to observe the progress on the Lavin-Bernick Center for University Life, more commonly known as the University Center, last week.

The walk-through consisted mostly of members and officers of Tulane Student Government Organizations, as well as representatives from TUCP.

Executive Vice President of the Undergraduate Student Government Bryan Cole, coordinated the event with the help of Assistant Vice President of Student Affairs Carolyn Barber-Pierre. In addition to Barber-Pierre, the walkthrough was led by Leland Bennett, the director of the University Center, Missie McGuire, the assistant vice president of student centers and interior designer Nancy Bowden Stewart.

Cole originally planned the walk-through for Sept. 3, 2005, but the event was cancelled due to Hurricane Katrina.

"The basement was flooded almost to the first floor after Katrina," Cole explained. "But since the basement consisted mostly of the steel beams that would make up the wall, not much had to be replaced." And while the air ducts in the basement had to be replaced, Cole reported that the structure's hurricane proof exterior windows lived up to their title and survived the storm.

According to the UC renovation Web site, the new structure, designed by architect Vincent James, will gain 40,000 square feet, including 8,000 square feet in meeting space, as a result of the reconstruction.

"It was pretty impressive," Newcomb College President Shira Finkelstein said. "Many of their ideas definitely seemed to be in response to students' needs, such as offices for each student organization."

The building will house the campus bookstore, common areas, a Whitney bank, a barbershop, study spaces, breakout rooms and eight dining venues, as well as the student affairs, student media, student programs and student government offices.

Additionally, the building features ample natural lighting sources, such as window walls and skylights. There will also be a water wall, which aside from aesthetics will serve as a practical way to cool the building. There will also be a catwalk from the UC to the Fogelman Arena to encourage activity in both buildings. Currently, there is discussion of including a FedEx/Kinkos as well.

The patio area will be in the former location of Pocket Park and will include space for a large viewing screen to show outdoor films, although the university is not providing the actual screen at this time.

Also revealed over the course of the walk-through was the possible fate of the Pavilion.

After months of communicating with Tulane students, the Newcomb-Tulane Task Force presented its recommendations to the Board of Tulane yesterday. The task force was created by the board with the charge of recommending how the Newcomb and Tulane College's names and endowments will be used to support the Renewal Plan.

In order to preserve the names of the colleges' founders, the task force recommended the newly formed Undergraduate College be named the Newcomb-Tulane College. They also suggested the establishment of the H. Sophie Newcomb Memorial College Institute in order to continue Newcomb's history in women leadership.

"From now on, every undergraduate diploma will bear the names of Newcomb and Tulane as a tribute to their contributions to higher education," Catherine D. Pierson, chair of the Board of Tulane, said. "For the first time, every woman undergraduate can now become

Green Wave wins two of three against Oral Roberts; falls to 14th

Blake Roter

The Green Wave took two of three games from Oral Roberts this past weekend at Zephyr Field, improving to 12-6 on the year, but dropping two spots to 14th in the Baseball America Top 25 poll.

The series opener belonged to senior center-fielder Nathan Southard who went two for three Tulane was not as successful in Saturday's game, losing 13-7. After spotting Oral Roberts a 6-3 lead, the Wave fought back to tie the game 6-6 after four innings. No runs were scored again until the decisive ninth when the Golden Eagles put up seven on the scoreboard on the strength of three home runs off three different pitchers.

The Wave wasted prime scoring opportunities in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. Redshirt-freshman Stephen Porlier threw five scoreless innings in relief, striking out nine men before being replaced in the eighth inning. Southard, Brad Emaus and Warren McFadden each scored two runs in the game. Hamilton and Tim Guidry both had two RBIs.

"This is certainly a disappointing day," Jones said. "It feels like we wasted a really good performance by Stephen Porlier. It was a heck of a ballgame for eight innings, but you've got to give credit to Oral Roberts."

Tulane made up for Saturday's disappointment with a strong 9-3 victory Sunday to take the series. Hamilton was 4-for-4 on the day with two home runs, a walk and four RBIs. Freshman Anthony Scelfo hit a three-run homer in the first inning, the first of his young career. McFadden and Seth Henry each added an RBI of their own.

Junior right-hander Brandon Gomes (2-2) made up for his loss to LSU earlier in the week by scattering five hits and striking out eight batters over seven innings to earn the win.

"Gomes was really good," said Jones. "He really had good control of his breaking ball, and that's what you've got to do to get these guys."

Oral Roberts scored a run in the first inning, but the lead was short-lived as Hamilton singled to drive in a run in the bottom half, before Scelfo's three run shot.

Hamilton's three home runs and eight RBIs on the weekend add to his team lead four homers and 16 RBIs for the season. McFadden had seven hits in the series and leads the Wave with a .388 average, 26 hits and 10 doubles.

First Basemen Mark Hamilton batted 4-4 including two home runs driving in four runs against Oral Roberts in the series finale in which the Wave produced nine runs off of 13 hits.

with a triple, home run and two walks as Tulane won the opener 7-5. His two-run homer in the third tied the game at 2-2. After a Cat Everett single, Mark Hamilton ripped a home run over the 400-foot sign in centerfield to give the Wave a 4-2 lead. Tulane runs in the fourth and fifth were followed by a Southard triple and run in the sixth putting the Wave up 7-3. Oral Roberts scored one run in both the seventh and eighth but was halted there.

"Nathan Southard has been a catalyst for us for a while now, and he certainly was again tonight," head coach Rick Jones said. "He had a major impact with his effort."

Nicholls State upsets Wave

The Nicholls State Colonels beat No. 14 Tulane 7-4 at Zephyr Field on Tuesday night. The Colonels victory, their first over Tulane since 2000, snapped a 12-game Green Wave series win streak.

Nicholls State grabbed a 1-0 lead in the top of the second on a fielder's choice. The Green Wave then responded in the bottom half of the inning with a pair of runs. Senior outfielder Matt Riser drove in freshman infielder Anthony Scelfo with a double into right-center field. Sophomore infielder Cat Everett followed with his 11th RBI of the season to give Tulane the lead.

Head coach Rick Jones elected to give freshman righthander Jonathan Garrett his first start of the season. Garrett lasted just 3.2 innings before giving way to junior right-hander Matt Goebel. Garrett retired the first two in the fourth inning, but allowed Nicholls St. to knot the game at three as sophomore infielder Patrick Thompson lined the game-tying single to right field.

The Green Wave defense allowed 10 hits to the 5-14 Colonels, holding only four Colonels on base at the end of innings, while their offense produced the same number of hits but stranded nine on base in the 7-4 loss.

In the fifth inning, Goebel (0-1) allowed a line drive two-out RBI double to infielder Jose Higuera, and on the next pitch senior Keith Delahoussaye drilled a double down the third base line to score Higuera, giving the Colonels a 4-3 lead.

Saints catch all-pro Brees

Benny Powell

The New Orleans Saints calmed speculations over who their 2006 starting quarterback would be by announcing the signing of former San Diego

Chargers all-pro Drew Brees on Tuesday to a six-year $60 million contract including a $10 million signing bonus.

When the team presented Brees to the media Wednesday, it also released last season's starter Aaron Brooks who led the team to its first playoff victory in 2001.

Before being handed his black and gold No. 9 Saints jersey, the league's top free agent quarterback visited the also-interested Miami Dolphins. But the Saints brought Brees in over the weekend to visit the city and the team's Metairie headquarters, offering the highest bid of any team.

"The feeling that I got when I came here, was this sincere feeling that these guys really wanted me here and they really had confidence in me, and the issues with my surgery," Brees said. "I just felt like they had

WBC entertains before March Madness play

Ben Eisenberg

It's the middle of March and just before the NCAA tournament kicks into high speed, sports fans should turn their attention to the World Baseball Classic.

With the legitimate countries now playing for baseball supremacy and the pretender (South Africa) countries out, it's become obvious that the players are deeply passionate about the outcomes of these games, even the Americans.

Baseball fans are also discovering that the United States is no longer the dominant baseball country in the world.

Perhaps you thought the WBC was going to be a friendly exhibition in which the stars played for three innings then gave way to career minor leaguers and backups. If that's what you thought, you were proven wrong last Sunday.

The United States beat Japan 4-3 in front of a rabid crowd in Anaheim, Calif., never mind the botched call by bush-league-quality umpire Bob Davidson who called a Japanese runner out on a sacrifice fly, saying he left early from third base (it's not a conspiracy, I promise).

All of the Japanese players were wrapped up in the intensity of the game, including Mariners superstar OF Ichiro Suzuki who was standing on the top of the dugout steps looking angry. The Japanese players cared a whole lot and so did the Americans.

Did anyone else see Florida Marlins 20-game winner Dontrelle Willis go nuts in the dugout after Houston Astros star closer Brad Lidge got a key strikeout for team USA with the bases loaded in the ninth? I had to check my calendar after that to make sure it was March, not October.

After AL MVP Alex Rodriguez of the New York Yankees delivered the game-winning hit in the bottom of the ninth, the rest of Team USA mobbed him at second base as though they had just won a playoff series. In that star-studded mob was Boston Red Sox catcher Jason Varitek who sparked a legendary brawl with Rodriguez and the Yankees in the summer of 2004.

It was strange, because as a Red Sox fan I found myself rooting for A-Rod and his teammate Derek Jeter and not hating myself for it afterwards. The emotion in the win over Japan made it clear that these stars are proud to be wearing the Team USA uniform, and that should pump up the baseball-viewing public. It certainly made me care.

On that note, barely overcoming Japan then losing to Korea shouldn't be considered a disappointment for Team USA. Even the Dominican Republic, a team loaded with all stars, hasn't been dominant. The Dominicans and the Americans, the two favorites entering the tourney, were both one loss away from elimination as of Tuesday night.

The fact is, baseball is played in many countries all over the world. Maybe some of those countries have caught up to us.

Korea, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Mexico, Venezuela and Japan all look as good as Team USA and the Dominican Republic, the two teams that are loaded with Major League superstars. We should get to know the previously anonymous Koreans that beat Team USA 7-3. We should get to know the Puerto Rican pitchers that have posted a sub 2.00 ERA so far. Baseball isn't just an American game anymore. (By the way, why does ESPN elect to show a pivotal USA vs. Korea game on ESPN Deportes? I don't have ESPN Deportes (a Spanish-speaking station), nor do I know anyone who has it. Memo to ESPN: showing a WBC game is not going to make me want to buy ESPN Deportes.)

So before you blow your money on those NCAA brackets (what, you think this is going to be the year you finally win it? Please.), check out some WBC games. You won't regret it.

Elections present challenges

Olivia Watkins
senior staff writer

The upcoming mayoral and federal elections pose several problems for New Orleans this year. Since the vast majority of the city's population has not returned and most of the city's resources, including polling centers, have been decimated, voters are facing several challenges in selecting representation.

The upcoming mayoral election for New Orleans was originally scheduled for November 2005. However, Hurricane Katrina severely altered the plans. Many of the city's polling places were destroyed. To combat this issue, most polling places have been relocated, although the 44 Newcomb Blvd. site will still serve Tulane's campus and community.

In addition to new polling places, Orleans Parish is going to be accepting massive numbers of absentee ballots. The Orleans Parish Registrar of Voters notes that "in-person absentee voting" will be allowed in offices from April 10 until the 13 and again on April 15. An absentee ballot can be obtained from the Registrar until April 18 and submitted as late as April 21, the day before the normal voting occurs. In order to make exceptions for the delays with postal service, ballots can even be received from and faxed into the registrar for submission.

While these exceptions are not uncommon for Orleans Parish, they are particularly important this year. Many residents, though they are currently living and working outside of the city and, some still, outside the state, still plan to return. This mayoral election has been seen as the most important in New Orleans history as the city and residents struggle to recover and rebuild. The election's winner will have a great deal of influence on how the city develops and whether residents are capable of returning at all.

But even if residents can find their way to the new sites, the voter turn out will be at an all time low. Since less than half of the city's population has returned and the residents, although there are no official numbers on the demographic composition of the city post-Katrina, are assumed to be both white and affluent. The changing face of the city will have

Denim sale benefits charity

Emily Hohenwarter

Kappa Alpha Theta sorority sold a variety of name brand jeans Tuesday to benefit the group's charity, the National Court Appointed Special Advocate Association. The event took place at the Theta house on Broadway.

Theta has supported CASA as its national philanthropy since 1989. CASA's mission is to support and promote court-appointed volunteer advocacy for abused and neglected children so they can live in safe, permanent homes.

"We worked with Steve Price and his not-for-profit company, Charity Denim," Theta's philanthropy chair Newcomb sophomore Britta Lansdowne said. "Charity Denim is able to procure jeans at below wholesale prices and sell them in order to raise money for whatever charity the host wants."

The Thetas have been planning the event for some time.

"The idea of having a retail sale of some sort has been rolling around for a while, and we were actually hoping to have [Charity Denim] come in October, but due to the storm, we were unable to," Lansdowne said. "So, we called and they were incredibly kind and accommodating. We worked out the dates and times together."

The sorority was very pleased with the amount of money they raised in the course of their efforts.

"We raised $2,000 for CASA which is a very large amount to contribute in one semester, especially considering our circumstances," Lansdowne said. "We also feel it was a fun event where everyone had a good time!" Other Thetas agreed that the jeans sale was a success.

Bill will repeal Lagniappe meal plan

Bill will repeal Lagniappe meal plan
Derek Little
contributing writer

As the spring semester is entering its last month, students who registered last winter for the Lagniappe semester are starting to ask a lot of questions about the shortened term. According to some members of Undergraduate Student Government, students primarily disapprove of the requirement for all students living on campus to purchase a meal plan. Vice President for Student Life Joshua Miller

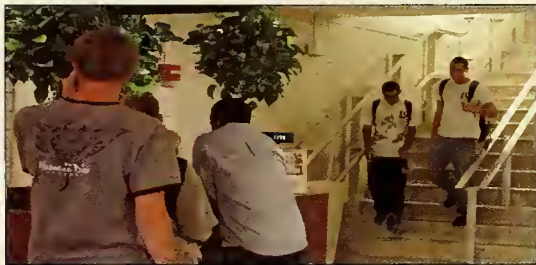

But despite all the help the university is providing for Lagniappe students, each student residing on campus is required to purchase a meal plan. Miller has received some complaints from upperclass students especially over this requirement.

Miller wrote the bill asking the administration to forego the requirement for upperclassmen. If the administration adopts the request, freshmen would still be required to purchase a plan.

USG and other students concerned with the issue do not understand why this has been mandated, unlike during a normal school year. Miller told USG during its debate that the sole reason is for economic purposes.

According to the Tulane Dining Services Web site, however, the decision was made "in order to provide the greatest variety of dining options and hours of operation for the Lagniappe semester."

Without the mandate, Dining Services would likely not collect enough revenue to remain open for this term. Lagniappe has effectively created the need for a complete array of dining options throughout this year, rather than just for three sponsored a USG bill asking for a reconsideration of the Lagniappe meal plan by university administrators.

The Lagniappe semester was created by the administration in order to alleviate some of the distress surrounding Hurricane Katrina. Its primary goal is to allow students to catch up, accelerate or stay on track with their degree, depending on whether or not they attended classes in the fall.

Additionally, the university has made the semester even more enticing by offering it tuition-free to those students who paid full-time tuition for the fall and spring. However, fees in the amount of $660 will be required.

Furthermore, if a student did not pay full time tuition for the 2005-2006 year, that student will only be charged $1000 per credit hour. This price is a reduction of the normal $1356 fee per credit hour for part-time students.

Arey ready to run

The Hullabaloo interviewed James Arey, one of the 23 candidates for mayor of New Orleans, about how his life has changed since Katrina, his candidacy and the issues surrounding the rebuilding of New Orleans.

Hullabaloo: What initially prompted you to declare your intention to enter the mayor's race?

James Arey: I think we were the first serious challenger to go up against Mr. Nagin. This would have been sometime late in 2004, so obviously before Katrina. It's one of those things where you're swelled with civic pride, and you're so unhappy with the way the current administration was working.

Nagin seemed to be constantly at odds with the city council, at odds with the school board. Nagin seemed to spend more time participating in movie business and cutting ribbons than actually tending to the day-to-day running of the city. I think if enough final straws come your way politically, you say I'm angry enough about the way the administration is operating that I'm going to throw my hat into the ring.

H: Did some people expect you not to run after Katrina hit?

JA: I think that is absolutely true. Quite a few people came to me and said "we're so proud of you for having focused on the arts and having focused on the other things you were talking about, but obviously you're not still going to run after Katrina, are you?" And for about two weeks we weighed our options and said maybe, maybe not. And then we realized the reasons that got us into the race before Katrina were still valid, and the storm just strengthened our resolve. If we were going to rebuild an education system and use the arts really as a tool for job growth, then we wanted someone in city hall who knew what they were talking about.

H: If you could change anything, how would New Orleans change and how would we react to that change?

JA: First things first, we would fix the lights on the city hall sign. No. 2, we would like to put into effect an evacuation plan that uses the latest technology to help benefit everybody in the case of a necessary evacuation. There is going to be one; it's just a matter of when. There's a pilot program in St. Tammany parish already that is giving first responders and leaders in the rescue services top-of-the-line global satellite phones.

What we are talking about is using that same technology in New Orleans, nominating ward and district captains and getting radios in those people's hands. During an evacuation they would stay, reporting to the city council member. It's a program that works in cities like Chicago for snow emergencies and Los Angeles for earthquakes or mudslides or fires or whatever the disaster of the month is out in California. Using the latest technology is something we have to embrace now to get ready for this year's hurricane season.

H: What about the green-zone controversy, how do you feel the city should go about dealing with rebuilding issues?

JA: It has to be up to the neighborhoods. Every single neighborhood is on an even playing field right now as far as how they're going to be able to repopulate their street, their neighborhood, their district, their area.

A couple of the candidates have referred to green space as nothing more than glorified drainage ditches, and that couldn't be further from the truth. It is parks, it is playgrounds and it is open spaces for things

Hornets win in N.O. Tulane goes 2-1 against Jaguars

Benny Powell

After playing a well-received 30 home games in Oklahoma City, Okla., and three in Baton Rouge, La., after evacuating due to Hurricane Katrina, the New Orleans Hornets stated that the city's showing at the three games they would play in the rebuilding town would influence the team's future there.

"It's important to me to make the right decision, not just a money decision. The team would be an absolute financial success to stay in Oklahoma," team owner George Shinn said. "If everybody here, the state, could step up and give us some confidence that everything is going to work here, then we'll be back here."

In front of a typical crowd of 17,483, the Hornets lost to the Los Angeles Lakers 113-107 March 8, fell 109-94 to the Denver Nuggets March 18 but posted a 120-108 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers Tuesday to end their eight game losing streak dating back to Feb. 26.

"I told the team that's the first time that I've seen that time in three weeks, that's the way we played in the beginning of the season," Head coach Byron Scott said. "We were really in attack mode tonight, for whatever reason, we came with a different attitude tonight and as a team that group of guys said that enough is enough; we got to start playing basketball the way that we are capable of playing and tonight was a good night for it."

The Hornets battled back from a 12-3 opening deficit to knot the game at 15 on a pair of free throws from shooting guard Rasual Butler. They would trail by two on additional three possessions in the first quarter, but the Hornets would lead the contest throughout its duration, shooting 51.8 percent (44-85) from the field and 54.5 percent (12-22) from behind the arc; this included 34 points off of 19 Clipper turnovers and a game high of 32 points from Butler.

The Green Wave's 7-2 win over South Alabama on Sunday clinched an unusual weekend series for Tulane; their fourth series win in five tries this season, the match brought their record to 14-8. Friday night's 6-3 victory and Saturday's 8-4 defeat were played at Zephyr Field, and Sunday's 7-2 win was contested in Mobile on South Alabama's campus.

The 14th-ranked Green Wave opened the series on the right arm of sophomore Sean Morgan's eight-inning, career-high 11 strikeout performance. Morgan (4-1) started a little shaky, spotting the Jaguars a 2-0 lead in the top of the first before the Green Wave bats answered in the next stanza. Junior first baseman Mark Hamilton led off the second with a solo homer to right, and two outs later, senior left-fielder Matt Riser laid down a bunt single before stealing second and scoring on a strikeout. Tulane's pitching performance was a highlight in the South Alabama series. Sean Morgan wild pitch by South Alabama starter Zach Piccola (1-2).

A solo homer by center-fielder Tyler Jones in the third gave South Alabama a 3-2 lead, but the Greenies went ahead in the fourth for good. With two outs and the bases loaded, freshman third baseman Seth Henry knocked a bases-clearing double, giving Tulane a 5-3 lead.

the basement NFL setting pace for 2006 season

staff writer

I am professional sports guy, and I've had a rough week. I got very little love from ESPN because of the NCAA tournament. My friends have been sticking their brackets in my face, bragging about their lucky upset picks.

I'll take advantage of this lull in activity to call attention to the significant developments that have taken place in what has been a busy NFL off-season. NFL off-season player movement has been common in recent years because of the salary cap, which forces teams to release good and even great players frequently. So far, we've seen star offensive weapons Terrell Owens, Drew Brees and Daunte Culpepper change teams.

The most controversial and highly publicized move of the off-season so far has to be wide receiver Terrell Owens signing with the Dallas Cowboys. One part of me says that this is an awesome move for the Cowboys. When he's on the field, T.O. may be the most dominant receiver in the league.

He caught 14 touchdown passes in 2004 and almost led the Philadelphia Eagles to the Super Bowl. His physical skills have never been a question. Then again, we last saw him feuding with Donovan McNabb and Coach Andy Reid in Philadelphia before being kicked off of the team. He has so far been the epitome of a clubhouse cancer, and teaming him with disciplinarian head coach Bill Parcells has the makings of a cheesy sitcom plot.

Owens got kicked out of San Francisco, then got kicked out of Philly. The same thing will happen after two or three years in Dallas, but when he's in uniform, Dallas will be scary offensively.

The move that has New Orleansians looking forward to next season for once is the Saints' acquisition of quarterback Drew Brees.

Brees is the best thing to happen to New Orleans sports fans since the Superdome was built. Brees proved he's a legitimate stud with a sophomore season in San Diego in which he passed for 3,500 yards and 24 touchdowns. The Saints finally got smart and gave up on Aaron Brooks. Seriously, it's hard to do justice to how terrible Brooks

Last season, Tulane baseball left Turchin Field for the most coveted diamond in college baseball, Rosenblatt Stadium in Omaha, Neb., as they battled for the National Championship in the College World Series. The Green Wave was looking to open their 2006 season in a renovated Turchin with more seats to accompany the fans who followed the Green Wave during Super Regional action last season. Due to the destruction caused by Hurricane Katrina on the facility, the team was forced to play their home games in familiar Zephyr Field in Metairie. Recently, the Green Wave head coach Rick Jones spoke with the Hullabaloo on how the team is handling hosting visitors away from home.

STEPHEN DAGLSTADT PHOTOGRAPHY

Making Zephyr their home while waiting for their stadium to be rebuilt, the Wave have been faced with challenges including a drop in fan attendance and having to travel to practice.

Hullabaloo: How do you feel about fan attendance overall at Zephyr field so far this season?

Coach Jones: It's been very good, and we expected it to be good. There's not a lot going on around town, coming off of a world series year, and our fan base last year we were in the top ten in attendance, so we expected it to be good, but we really want to get back in Turchin.

H: Overall, the reported regular season fan attendance so far this year on average is 500-1,000 people less than it was last year. Which isn't much, but this stadium is bigger than Turchin, so does fan support feel lighter?

CJ: No, we don't feel that. The biggest problem out here is our kids have to get out here everyday. It's tough to get out of class, get a ride, take 15 minutes to get out here, then drive back. It's expensive paying for gas and what have you. So, the biggest disruption is just the time lost in their day that we wished didn't happen, but it's great to have this venue as an alternative.

Then from a playing standpoint, it's just a big ballpark. A lot of balls that go out in Turchin don't go out here and sometimes our hitters get frustrated with that. But this is our home for the year and that's the way we have to look at it.

H: So far in the season you haven't played any Conference USA teams and LSU hasn't come down yet. How do you think everything will change once those teams come?

CJ: I'm sure we'll have a good attendance for LSU; we've never not sold it out. Rice weekend should be a good crowd, and as the weather warms, we are past Mardi Gras and the parades and every thing. I think we've had solid attendance, but I think you'll see even more.

TULANE'S ENDOWMENT SHRINKS

By Lacie Starr

This week, President Scott Cowen exposed the university's endowment to students and subsequently tried to restore the reputation of Tulane's stature with a spurt of optimism. On Monday, Cowen presented a Power Point about the new budget. However, when he got to the slide displaying Tulane's small endowment, he seemed to fall short of the audience's expectations. As murmurs from the crowd grew, Cowen panicked.

"Stop laughing!" he shouted anxiously. "I know it's not huge, but... It's been soaking in cold water! So what if it shrinks a little?!" He then proceeded to storm out of the room, while barely holding back tears. To gain a better understanding of President Cowen's peculiar behavior, the Fullabaloo asked Mrs. Cowen to comment on her husband's unusual defensiveness.

"When you put the pressure of expectations on Scott, it sometimes has a negative impact on his ability to perform. He starts out with solid perseverance and a rigid sense of purpose. But if he feels inadequate, his deflating ego causes his determination to soften," she said.

"Um, yeah...discharge," she replied awkwardly.

By Tuesday, Cowen regrouped. He attempted to contextualize the endowment's shrinkage and rebuild the university's self-image.

"Look, we all look through magazines and see graphs about endowments from Harvard and Yale," he explained. "Most universities you encounter in real life just don't have those $12 billion funds hanging around in their vaults. The size of your endowment isn't as important as what you do with it."

In that spirit, Cowen announced that the university would honor the memory of Sophie Newcomb with a monument in the middle of the academic quad. Despite these efforts, some women felt disappointed.

"I'm a real woman, and I have real needs that Scott Cowen just can't satisfy with his tiny endowment," said Newcomb sophomore Elenora Hebert. "He's taking away my college and trying to replace it with some memorial. Cowen ought to compensate us."

And compensate is exactly what Cowen did.

On Thursday, the President's Office released a statement along with plans for a 14-foot-tall obelisk to be placed outside of Gibson Hall. The inscription will read, "This monument erected under the potent leadership of President Scott S. Cowen in honor of Sophie Nucome."

TULANE ENGINEERS ENGINEER A COMEBACK

By The General

Tulane engineering students seized control of critical campus functions in an audacious coup d'état earlier this morning. An estimated 400 heavily armed students led by General MacGyver overran Tulane University Police Department forces and now control key facilities including the president's house, the computer server room, Bruff, Physical Plant, Gibson and most importantly, the Boot.

For the past three months, engineers have been in heated talks to restore the engineering program to its status before Scott Cowen slashed it to pieces like Inigo Montoya on steroids. Earlier this week, the negotiations fell through when Cowen refused to divulge the financial details behind his controversial decision.

During the argument, Cowen was quoted as saying, "You want proof, huh? I got your proof right here! Kiss my ass. I do what I want, bitch!" Intelligence reports indicate that planning for the attack commenced immediately after the meeting.

To aid in the assault, the engineers constructed several lethal robots that now patrol the campus. Some of the robots have acquired a particularly brutal reputation, such as the T1000, Johnny 5, Robocop and a squadron of dancing ASIMO robots donated by the Japanese. Several hippies attempted to camp on the UC quad in protest but quickly dispersed at the sight of Mega Man making his way down McAlister Drive.

Early this afternoon, engineers restored to operational status the large artillery piece in front of the Naval ROTC building. Shelling of the B-School buildings commenced immediately. Business school students were surprised at the news but went back to doing nothing when they remembered that they never go to class anyway.

With full control of the university's network and computer systems, the engineers have created a large gaming network, where they can impress the ladies with their I337 h4x0r skillz and pwn noobs from other schools. There will also be a marathon airing of all six Star Wars movies tonight in McAlister, however, no entry will be granted without costume.

Upon storming the President's house, the engineers found Cowen having a lavish dinner party with Donald Trump. Cowen immediately surrendered and gave up the location of a top-secret-15-year Tulane University plan. The plan outlines Tulane's intentions to eventually take over Loyola and scrap all the sports teams. After the two universities have been gutted of anything useful, they will sell the whole shebang to LSU so that LSU students can have a place to stay during Mardi Gras.

The engineers have begun plans to further tighten their control over the campus. It is rumored that early Saturday morning Doc Brown will arrive in his DeLorean to conduct a daring experiment. If all goes according to plan, lightning striking the Newcomb clock tower will generate the 1.21 gigawatts needed to send engineers back in time to prevent Hurricane Katrina.

Sexual harassment by Facebook poking reported

A Tulane University Police Department officer responded Tuesday to an emergency call in Late Doris Hall. A female student reported a sexual assault after being poked on the Facebook. The student signed on to her Facebook account at approximately 12:30 pm, and was notified that she had been poked by someone named Lester Lefton. Lefton was taken into custody and remains under suspicion of the crime pending charges.

TULANIANS COMPETE, TOGETHER

By Calvin Jenkins

Instead of watching the Final Four to alleviate the load of class work, four Tulane students have decided to pick up the ball in an absence of sports on campus to entertain themselves.

"There's only so many times we can watch Billy Muhl walk to the mound," sophomore Hahndi Auferio said. "There's nothing going on, so we decided to entertain the students ourselves. I'm sure we can draw a crowd the size of women's volleyball."

Composed of 6'1" center Auferio, forward John Smalls who concentrates in social work, point guard Jamie Hurt and guard Earl Jenkins, the team has a mission to compete together while representing the diversity of Tulane University.

The differences between the athletes have been an obstacle to the team's success on the court. Auferio's sandals take away from his ability to plant his feet and be a presence in the post, while Jenkins' lack of presence at practice doesn't help chemistry.

"According to Jenkins, this isn't a team," Smalls said. "It's him and us three. He's a guard and he thinks that all he needs to do is show up for games, catch-and-shoot. But, he doesn't quite get the holistic playbook that we have, that relies on every step of each player to be precise for the plays to work."

"Are we talking about practice?," Jenkins asked after a game. "I just scored 30 points, and grabbed 10 rebounds. I don't need practice."

His red shirt, green shorts and black All-Stars flash up the court as he tries to out-do the other males on the court, often while encouraging Hurt on her good work in practice with a slap on the rear-end.

"It is hard being the only girl on this team," Hurt said. "I have no one to relate to or understand what I'm going through at times. Earl tries to give helping hands, but that in itself is a problem."

Hurt leads the league in assists with 55 in five games, which could be attributed to Jenkins' 110 points over the same span.

Auferio is also a force on the team, ranking third in the league in rebounds, but he is being encouraged to reach for the top in the category.

"I'm fine being third, but Jenkins always gives me these crazy motivational speeches like, 'you don't hustle, you don't eat,' or 'two is not a winner and three no body remembers.'"

"He also makes me do the most degrading things in practice which he thinks will improve my hustle, like chasing chickens. Who would do that to a human being?," Auferio said.

The self-proclaimed mastermind behind the team, Smalls, tries to make up for what he lacks in physical performance with his head.

"I can't go four full quarters, or hustle from end of the court to the other, Smalls said. "But I know how to open up the opposition and trick them so bad that they are tickled pink."

Performing at .500, the team is halfway done with their season and they still don't have a name. Jenkins says that sacrificing his idea of calling the team the Earlers was a major contribution to the team and he should be able to attend practice when he wants.

HIVE FORMED IN THE BOOT

By Rachel Nicholls

After shaking off their loss to the Denver Nuggets last Saturday, former Tulane basketball player and current Hornet Linton Johnson took his new teammates Chris Paul and J.R. Smith to the Boot last Monday night before their matchup against the Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday.

"I love the Boot, baby," Johnson said. "This kid from Tulane came in here the other day and I asked him, 'Is the Boot still up?' and he said, 'Yeah'. So, you know me, I love the Boot, I asked Chris and J. 'Eh, yall want to go to the Boot before we leave?' and they was like, 'yeah' so we went in there."

Smith, who is a second year player, took a class at Tulane during his rookie season but said his tenure with the school didn't last long enough for him to be introduced to the bar.

"I really didn't have enough time to get to the Boot," Smith said. "When I came to Tulane, all I knew for them three weeks was Herbert Hall, that's how I wanted to keep it. I didn't need to know where this and that was, I just needed to know where Herbert Hall was."

"But, then I heard that Lindsay Lohan visited the Boot when she filmed a movie down here. So, me being a celebrity myself, I figured I needed to stop by the Boot to see what's kickin', you know what I'm saying?" Smith said.

Johnson admits that it was kind of hard getting the guys out at first, to go out in a city that they hardly knew.

"They were hesitant at first, but you know I had to tell them, Johnson said. "I love the Boot, baby. After every party we went to when I was playing at Tulane, we'll be like 'where we going after the party?' cause, you know, we still was looking for fun after the party. I would always be the one like, 'let's go to the Boot, baby,'" Johnson said.

Paul, who received another Rookie of the Month award during the Nuggets game, was turned on to going to the Boot after realizing that he hadn't been able to acclimate himself into his new city's night life.

"There's not much to do out in Oklahoma City, and it's pretty bad that we go from playing in the Big Easy to the, what is it, the Nearer State. Paul said. "I don't get it, so that's what turned me on right there."

"But going into the club, I was introduced to how dirty the dirty south is."

What appeared to be a culture shock for Paul was a sense of nostalgia for Johnson.

"Aww, man. It was everything I wanted my homecoming to be like when I went there, and I'm glad they are keeping Tulane traditions alive," Johnson said.

"I went in there, and the first thing I noticed was the bear-foot chicks dancing. I told CP and JR about one of my favorite boot moments ever. I'm in there right, this chick is dancing on the bar bear-foot, so I'm at the bar, and she's kind of turning me on wiggling her toes in my face, so I asked her, 'what, you want to dip your toe in my drink?'. And she goes, 'why don't you stick yours in mine, I love the Boot, baby.'"

As the basketball players make their way into the entrance, the bartenders observed the athletes.

"At first I see them come in and I'm like, 'alright three black guys', and we just carry on as usual," Bartender Stan said. "As they started to mingle about the crowd, we paid more attention, and I notice L.J., and he showed us all love. But, them other two dudes, whoever they were, they really stunk up the place."

It could have been their lack of exposure in the city, but Paul and Smith went throughout the club basically unnoticed.

"It was really wild for me, cause you know when we go in parties, that's when they start, you know we are the party" Smith said. "But, for whatever reason that didn't work tonight. We couldn't get no girls, but LJ was mackin' LJ was getting girls over us for the first time can you believe that?"

Johnson relied on a single chatter to get girls while his homies watched in amazement

"Aww man, I was up in there, I was like, 'A one, a two, a hellava HULLABALOO, HULLABALOO, 'Ray, 'Ray.... CP and JR were acting real Hollywood in there. I don't know if the Boot was what they were looking for when we went in there, but I had the time of my life."

Before the episode at the Boot was over, Paul admitted standing at a pool table in front of a group of young woman who were smiling in his face and grabbing his platinum chain that reads 'CP3' in diamonds, which in hip-hop culture is termed 'groupies'.

But, Paul realized the number of women thinned out as he purchased drinks. When the last girl walked away from him, he recall a group of men on the other side of the bar with bottles in the air, saluting to him with the alleged 'groupies' on each of the guys arms.

When one of the young men said, "Thanks for the assist, rookie," Paul admitted it was time to go.

"I had enough with it man. I bet this would not have happened in Oklahoma city, Paul said. "I grabbed JR, who was already winning over his curfew, and we talk LJ off of the bar from around them bear foot chicks and got out of there. I'll never go back to the boot."

"I love the boot," Johnson said. CP was overreacting, he has to realize that's how it is down here. The rookie still got some things to learn. He got schooled, simple as that."

PARDON THE INTERRUPTION

Green Wave Edition

Tony Kornheiser: Hi, boys and girls. On our last show, we talked about the suspension of Duke lacrosse, controversial baseball scandals and what the direction the NFL will go in after the retirement of the great Paul Tagliabue. Today, it's fitting we go full circle to a university that has had a number of sports suspended, and it's leaders are facing controversy again over what to do with their athletic department at Tulane University.

Michael Wilbon: First of all, Yo' boy Tagliabue was not great, he was just greedy, just like Scott 'Communist' Cowen down there at Tulane. Let me tell you something, Tulane has a great baseball team, had a great tennis program, had a great swimming & diving program, had a great soccer team, but that's all gone. You know why?

Tony: Why, Michael?

Michael: Cause Cowen wants to "Think Green," as they say down there on St. Charles Avenue. He wants to keep the football team, and keep the basketball team. Why? For them green backs, that's why. Swimming & Diving won't bring money, but football and basketball could.

Tony: You sound ridiculous Michael. If we were talking the Florida Gators, then I could see why he would want to keep football and basketball, but Tulane football and basketball, I just don't know Michael: I said could, Tony. What is your hearing deteriorating with your hair. If Tulane football and basketball won, they wouldn't be in a predicament right now.

Tony: No, you are wrong Tulane football has won. Twelve out of 12 games and went on to win the Liberty Bowl in 1998 with your boy Shaun King.

Michael: Who?

Tony: You know who I'm talking about. The problem with Tulane athletics are those wasps that attend the school. Those kids are spoiled, I visited there. I went after the hurricane to check on the historic sites in the city, make sure the land where the Sugar Bowl, where the three Super Bowls were held, was still a hallowed ground.

Michael: You've never been to Tulane?

Tony: Yes I have. I'll prove it to you and make you Hullebaloo.

Michael: Hulla-ba-what?

Tony: I'm on that campus and these kids drive brand new BMWs, the girls were Ugg boots, DKNY skirts and Dolce & Gabbana glasses in March. If I drove a BMW in college, I would drop out. It costs 40 grand a year to go to that school. I could buy my daughter a used BMW and pay for her wedding with that.

Michael: Tony, again, you mention women and you get off of the point.

Tony: What's the point?

Michael: The point is, this school has a great tradition, a great academic tradition, not athletic. Cowen should stop worrying about getting the Green Wave on ESPN, stop putting his two cents in to the BCS BS and cater this athletic department around this academic tradition. You want to talk about women, there are furious women, angry women, suing the university over tradition. Bnng the sports that these kids want to see, and that would attract kids that want to play them that could compete in those classes also. Bnng back Tennis, women's swimming & diving, bring back—

Tony: Bring back the old Michael Wilbon that I used to know. Are you picking women's swimming & diving over football and basketball on ESPN?

Michael: Yes. For the sake of an athletic department at Tulane at all, yes

Tony: Take that to your head, from our head head, over here on PTI. Don't change the channel. Next we talk about the return of Dennis Rodman to basketball and Aaron Brooks for MVP next year in Oakland Michael: 'Take that to your head', hanging out in Brooklyn again, ha?

Tony: Yes, Sir! Jigga and Bleek, Holla at yo' boy! You just mad cause I have more street cred than you. PACE

Homerun Homecoming 2006

Christina Le
news editor

HomeRun2006 Homecoming kicked off the week-long celebration Sunday on the steps of McAlister Auditorium. A Tulane acapella group, THEM, performed for the crowd after a presentation of the Homecoming Court and the traditional lighting ceremony.

Tulane has regained its spirit and will celebrate Home-run2006 Homecoming this weekend.

Homerun2006 will feature a week-long celebration of Tulane baseball, culminating in the homecoming game against Rice University on Saturday. This is the first year homecoming will be held in the spring and focused on a sport other than football.

Regularly scheduled in the fall, homecoming was cancelled due to the closure of the university.

While at her host institution in New York, Alyson Vivittanapa, the Undergraduate Student Government Tidal Wave chair, began making conference calls and e-mail correspondence with the USG advisor and executive board members seeking a way to continue the traditional event in the spring.

Vivittanapa had the opportunity to ask President Scott Cowen if her dreams for homecoming would still be realized.

"I went to one of his town hall meetings in New York and asked if we could still have homecoming," Vivittanapa said. "He said that the administration was already thinking about it."

When Vivittanapa returned to New Orleans for the spring semester, she was given a finalized date for the homecoming event.

"A week after I got back from being an Orientation Coordinator, they gave me the date of April 1 for homecoming," Vivittanapa said.

As Tidal Wave Chair, Vivittanapa is responsible for organizing most of the events that would normally occur during the week leading up to the homecoming game, including a float parade, the nominations and elections of homecoming court and a fireworks show.

Architecture expands to Tremé

Emily Hohenwarter
assistant news editor

Architects' Week at Tulane University is changing this year in response to the architectural needs of New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina. The annual design competition, sponsored by the School of Architecture Student Government, is expanding into the city.

Claire Cahan and David Demsey, fourth-year architecture students, are leading the project.

"Most years, the installations are on display for only a few days on campus and then are taken down, which is very wasteful and really only benefits the school for a few days," Demsey said.

Architects' Week Exchange, the restructured version of Architects' Week, will take place March 31 through April 7. Six teams will design and build functional pieces that will be installed at the McKinley-Sankofa Wellness Center in the historic Tremé district.

Each piece will be built to foster communication in an area where many residents are still displaced.

"This year we are going to build functional pieces to be placed in the Tremé neighborhood that will last for a few years. Our focus is on quality and function, as well as the overall ideas behind the week, investigations into form, material and connection," Demsey said.

The installations are aimed at making the McKinley-Sankofa Wellness Center more of a community hub.

"Our goal is to help provide a space where people can gather outside of the wellness center. There will be space for seating, gathering, a mural to be created by neighborhood children, as well as a message board with a map of the area so that people can sign and show who is back in the area," Demsey said. Teams of students decide what they want to build.

"We will be building such items as benches, bulletin boards and community space in the Tremé neighborhood, but it is up to the students," Demsey said.

"Emphasis will be placed on modularity because they [the installations] will be built here and moved to the site," Cahan said.

Tulane architecture students are working with Memphis-based architect Coleman Coker, who founded buildingstudio, an architecture firm whose mission is "to blur the boundaries between architecture, art, craft and thinking."

Coker will act as a mentor for the students as they work to build creative, yet useful architecture pieces for the community.

"He guides the designs and gives construction advice," Cahan said of Coker. "On Friday, he'll meet the students and groups will start brainstorming and refining the program."

The competing groups will also be working with the non-profit housing group Ujima, a London-based provider of homes to rent for ethnic minority and refugee households.

Student leaders had a difficult time organizing the annual Architects' Week this year because of lack of funding.

"The event is funded by the [School of Architecture] student government," Demsey said. "We have received some donations from local businesses, mostly restaurants. Our budget for this year is roughly one third of last year's budget due to the storm."

The culmination of Architects' Week will include a party with members of the Tremé community.

"Friday we will have a celebration at the community center with residents and local groups. Hot 8 Brass Band will play and there will be refreshments and desserts," Cahan said.

Landrieu presents mayoral platform

Ross Doppelt

Appearing at the invitation of the Tulane College Democrats, Lt. Gov. Mitch Landrieu presented his mayoral platform to several dozen students Wednesday night.

Landrieu began by conveying autobiographical information, particularly his connections to New Orleans' Broadmoore neighborhood. He cited several City Council Members who lived within a few blocks of his childhood home and mentioned his parents' longstanding residency in the area. However, the lieutenant governor's speech did not mention growing up during the administration of his father, former Mayor Moon Landrieu.

Instead of building his image around family connections, the candidate tried to craft his personal political narrative as a reformer's rise in a time of discontent. In front of the Democratic audience, Landrieu tied himself to the Clintonian legacy of restructuring government in the South. After dropping the 42nd president's name, Landrieu also borrowed a familiar piece of rhetoric. Instead of relying too heavily on public projects or private enterprise, the government had to find "the third way," Landrieu said.

It was in this context that he touted his 18-year public service record. To portray Louisiana's disarray in the late 1980s, he depicted a state lacking ethics rules, lobbying disclosure and fiscal solvency. The former state representative took credit for many of the reforms enacted by the legislature since his career began in 1988, praising initiatives to balance the budget while providing social services. However, Landrieu dwelled heavily on his role as Louisiana's ambassador in the office of lieutenant governor.

"This state has an image problem because some of what they think about us is true, but much of it is not," the candidate said.

He continued by contending the virtues of a cultural economy. Landrieu explained that as outside perceptions changed, the state saw a 15 to one return on investment in the tourism and film industries.

Projecting the theme of appearances onto New Orleans' current situation, Landrieu criticized incumbent Ray Nagin for his "image problems." The challenger also stressed the importance of reputation for diplomatic purposes.

"I have a better relationship with the City Council than the mayor [and] a better relationship with the legislature than the governor, mayor

Baseball strikes in C-USA

The Green Wave made its debut in Conference USA play last weekend, winning two of three games on the road against the Memphis Tigers (12-11). After dropping the series opener Friday night, Tulane stormed back to win the final two games.

The Tigers started the series strong with an 11-4 win Friday. Sophomore starting pitcher Sean Morgan (4-2) was charged with the loss after allowing four earned runs through five innings. Tulane pitchers allowed nine earned runs on the night.

Sophomore outfielder Warren McFadden had two hits and one RBI on the night, but otherwise the offense was quiet.

"We came out flat, and they had a good night," senior outfielder Nathan Southard said. "We took a different approach the last two games."

The Green Wave came back to dominate the final two games Saturday and Sunday, outscoring the Tigers 17-3.

Tulane responded Saturday with a 7-1 win. Brandon Gomes pitched a complete game and picked up his third win of the season. Gomes allowed only 10 base runners and struck out two.

Freshman outfielder Aja Barto stood out offensively with two hits and two RBIs. Barto hit his second home run and also picked up his second steal of the year.

"We just focused really well at the plate," Southard said. "We didn't give away any at bats."

Lead-off hitter Matt Riser, followed by sophomore second baseman Brad Emaus, combined to reach base nine times and score four runs.

Sunday's game was no different as Tulane pounded Memphis 10-2 to win the rubber match. Red shirt freshman Stephen Porlier looked sharp through seven innings and improved his record to 4-1. He allowed five hits and one run while striking out five.

The lone threat mounted by the Tigers came in the bottom of the eighth, when Porlier handed a 7-1 lead over to sophomore reliever Trey Martin. Memphis loaded the bases against Martin with nobody out, but junior closer Daniel Latham came on to quiet the rally, allowing just a single run to score.

Southard and junior first baseman Mark Hamilton each collected three RBIs for the Green Wave, and Riser knocked in four runs from the lead-off spot to pace the offense.

"Memphis is a really good club; they've really improved over a year ago," head coach Rick Jones said. "To win two of three on the road against them is a good weekend."

The Green Wave may not have completed a perfect sweep of the Tigers, but head coach Rick Jones is happy with the team's progress.

"There will be days when you feel like you take a step back with such a young ball club," head coach Rick Jones said. "You're not going to win every game; the key is how you respond. Over the long haul, we want to have the kind of record that allows us to host the NCAA tournament."

Green Wave walks away from JSU

Chaitany Nandipati

The Green Wave baseball team took a brief interlude from the start of Conference USA play to defeat Jackson State (14-8) 14-4 this past Tuesday at Zephyr Field.

"A loss to Jackson State could've hurt our RPI," coach Rick Jones said. "It was definitely one of the stranger games we've been a part of."

The Green Wave overcame a 1-0 deficit in the first, by responding with eight runs of their own in the first three innings.

The Wave erased the early deficit with a two run first. Senior Matt Riser walked and advanced twice on wild pitches before scoring on a Warren McFadden single. After junior Mark Hamilton walked to load the bases, Aja Barto drew another walk to score Brad Emaus for a 2-1 Green Wave advantage.

The Wave would then add six runs over the next two innings to push the score to 8-1. After a small Tiger run that made the score 8-3, the Wave would add two more runs before book-ending their scoring with a four run sixth.

Three consecutive walks to Riser, Emaus and Nathan Southard loaded the bases, and a single by McFadden would score Riser. Hamilton then reached on a fielder's choice, and an error on the play would score Emaus and Southard. McFadden would then score the final run of the inning on a groundout by Cat Everett.

Redshirt freshman McFadden would finish perfect on the night going two for two with four RBIs to lead the balanced Wave attack. Hamilton chipped in four RBIs of his own going two of three at the plate. All nine Tulane starters reached base at least twice, and six had at least one RBI.

The Wave took advantage of a C-USA-record 19 walks by Jackson State to spark the offense.

"[Jackson State] just had a tough time getting the ball over the plate. You don't have as many pitches to swing at, and I thought our players showed very good patience at the plate when they weren't getting many good looks."

Mohl picked up the win, pitching five innings and giving up three runs on six hits with four strikeouts. Nathan Newman, Trey Martin and Matt Goebel pitched four innings of solid relief allowing a combined one run on two hits to close out the game.

The win pushed the Wave winning streak to three for the first time since late February improving its record to 18-9 on the season. While the victory over Jackson State was important, coach Jones was more focused on the team's performance over a longer period of time.

"Confidence comes from being successful," Jones said. "When you judge how well a team is doing, you have to look at how its doing over time. We've been playing .500 ball over the past two weeks, and that's what you really need to focus on."

Brad Emaus and the Green Wave scored 14 runs off of six hits, but were walked 19 times by the Tigers.

The Green Wave now opens a three game set with new C-USA member Rice, whom the Wave faced in the 2005 Super Regional and beat two out of three to advance to the College World Series, beginning this Friday at Zephyr Field.

Who'll chomp down the nets?

Dan Levy
staff writer

With all of the top seeds out and everyone's brackets busted, this Final Four lacks in big names but offers four gummy teams that have battled (George Mason and UCLA) and dominated (LSU and Florida) on their way to Indianapolis.

George Mason's victory over Connecticut on Sunday was amazing—less for the implausibility of a team that almost wasn't selected in the 65-game field taking out the best team in America, but instead for the way the game unfolded. UCONN didn't play poorly. Marcus Williams had 13 points and 11 rebounds. Rudy Gay actually took the game over at a pivotal point on a big stage, and the fast-paced of the game favored UCONN's overwhelming athleticism. During a critical seven-minute span during the second half, a couple of undersized big guys in Jai Lewis and Will Thomas dominated play inside against future first-rounders Hilton Armstrong and Josh Boone. Why Jim Calhoun didn't call timeout with six seconds left and his team down by two to design a play for Rashard "Money" Anderson, I will never know. Instead, Denham Brown got a good look at a step-back three at the buzzer, he just missed and George Mason's players stormed the court.

What LSU may lack in guard play, it makes up with the big-man duo of Glen Davis and Tyrus Thomas. Hearing CBS announcer Dick Enberg gush up when talking about Davis could make you cringe, but "Big Baby" Davis is certainly a special player. He may not have the freakish leaping ability of his freshman counterpart Thomas, nor play with the emotion of Florida's Joakim Noah, but his soft touch around the basket and outside shot make it difficult to imagine that they'll fall before they face Florida in the final. UCLA's defense may have looked like a steel curtain against Memphis, but that had more to do with Memphis' youth being served in a hostile environment. Also, the up-and-down play of the Tigers is pretty much all that UCLA sees in the Pac-10. I think LSU rolls, but Florida cuts down the nets Monday night.

With such a crazy first two weeks in the rear-view mirror, it's safe to say that we are in for some more surprises as it winds down. This tournament has yet to produce a great individual performance where a player puts the team on his back and carries them to victory. Usually, these performances come from the lesser-knowns who will never play a day of NBA basketball. Players from each team who fit that description are Florida's Lee "Token" Humphrey, George Mason's Tony "Crotch Shot" Skinn, UCLA's Cedric Bozeman and LSU's Garret Temple.

Baseball mid-season grades

Pitching and Defense:

Thirteen players have pitched with seven pitchers having pitched more than 10 innings. The staff does not have a dominant closer or starter but is well balanced. Stephen Porlier and Trey Martin have been pleasant surprises. Billy Mohl, Sean Morgan and Brandon Gomes have all been solid but not spectacular. The team's defense has been solid, with only 21 errors and only 13 unearned runs. B+

Offense:

Mark Hamilton is the new star of Tulane baseball, leading the squad in batting average, hits, homers and RBIs (.363, 37, 5, 27). Nathan Southard tops C-USA in runs scored and stolen bases (30, 17). Warren McFadden is the surprise on offense, second on the team in batting average, hits and RBIs (.361, 35, 21), and he leads C-USA with 11 doubles. However, the team has had trouble scoring runs and getting the clutch hit. This is probably due to inexperience. Five of the eight starters are freshmen or sophomores. The team has had to change its hitting philosophy, playing its home games at Zephyr Field, which has a far more spacious outfield than Turchin. B-

Coaching:

Rick Jones has done what he can with an inexperienced squad. Changes at catcher are necessary for long-term success. Jones has dealt well with injuries and inconsistency. He has had to replace three players drafted in the first three rounds of the major league draft. Jones has also had to find replacements for last year's starting catcher, first baseman, second baseman, shortstop, right fielder and two top pitchers. B+

How close to Omaha:

The key will be winning the conference. If that occurs, then the Green Wave can expect to host both the regional and super-regional. With a young team, playing at home will be critical. Getting to the super-regional would be a great accomplishment, though a bit of a long shot. If Rice wins the conference championship, the chance to host a super-regional will be slim. This is a solid tournament team, but not a definite top-16 team. Tulane has to be considered a long shot to get back to Rosenblatt and Omaha. Still, with Coach Jones at the helm, a trip to Nebraska is somewhere in the deck of cards.

Golf finishes last

Benny Powell
sports editor

The Tulane Men's golf team finished last for the second consecutive time this season after their performance at the Carter Plantation Invitational in Springfield, La., on Monday and Tuesday.

"We went to the tournament with four players, so we were a little short-handed," golf coach Tom Shaw said. "There isn't much to say about the first two rounds, but in the last round the guys showed a lot of pride and a better performance."

After their opening 332-stroke team performance that placed the team last overall in the first round, the Green Wave followed with a 333-stroke second round and a 313 third place finish.

Individually, Braden List was the top Tulane performer finishing 34th overall with an 18-over par finish. Nick Heather finished closely with a 20-over par 40th overall finish. Michael Birtel finished in 49th overall stroking 24-over par, and Chris Patrickridge finished last in the event with his plus-52 performance.

The Green Wave's top three performers managed to improve their scores as the rounds progressed. Birtel's performance in the final round was seven strokes better than his opening 84-stroke exhibition. Heather's final round score of 75 was five strokes better than his opening performance, and List's opening 79 was succeeded by one less swing the next two rounds.

"I saw marginal improvement," Shaw said. "I saw in this tournament we kept getting a little better as the tournament went on, and that's a good thing."

Southeastern Louisiana won the event with a 32 over par performance, eight strokes better than second place Mississippi State.

Jacksonville State's Julian Colmenares won the event finishing even, after stroking a round 69, second round 76 and third round 71.

The Green Wave competed in their last event of the season before the Conference USA Championship, on April 10 and 11 when they go to Jonesboro, Ark. for the ASL Indian Classic.

"Hopefully we'll get on a roll here and go into conference with some confidence," Shaw said.

STEPHEN DAIGLE/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

The Louisiana Superdome is still an inhospitable environment for Tulane University's 2006 Commencement. Instead, the ceremony will be hosted at the New Orleans Arena which will house approximately 15,000 graduating seniors and guests.

Jason Lieser
senior staff writer

After more than seven months since it sheltered tens of thousands of New Orleansians from the wrath of Hurricane Katrina, the Louisiana Superdome still looks nothing like the majestic image it once possessed.

While this stadium is miles from the Tulane University campus, it holds great significance for the school. Not only does the Green Wave football team call the Superdome home, but Tulane's unified commencement has been held there since 1999.

The Superdome is expected to be ready in time for the upcoming football season, but it was evident in the weeks immediately following Katrina, that the reconstruction would not be completed in time for graduation. This forced the university to start making alternate plans.

"At that point, while we were still in Houston, President [Scott] Cowen had the good idea — he thought — to hold the commencement outside on the campus," Tulane Vice President of Communications Debbie Grant said. "I had never done a commencement outside at Tulane. We had several conversations about how the weather is generally not terrific to hold an outside event in May."

"Besides the environmental aspects of it, where would we have done it? We were thinking [the Gibson Hall] quad would be

Roofies blamed for increase in campus date rape

Drew Johnson
staff writer

Universities worldwide have seen an increasing number of young people fall victim to date rape, usually by means of a drug called flunitrazepam. Tulane University has experienced a number of cases this semester.

The drug, known in the United States as Rohypnol, and on the street as a roofie, was originally created in the 1970s as a surgical anesthetic for hospital patients in Europe. The sedative has since spread across the globe. Though available for private use in some countries, it has yet to receive FDA approval in the United States and is still better known as the most prevalent date rape drug around the world.

In terms of physical effects, the drug highly intensifies the normal effects of alcohol when mixed into a drink. When drugged, the victim will experience drowsiness, decreased inhibition, lack of coordination and memory loss. These effects are normally felt within 15 to 20 minutes after ingestion, and the victim will become unconscious for up to 12 hours, depending on the dosage.

Rohypnol has 10 times the potency of Valium, another drug from the sedative family. The drug is so potentially dangerous in large dosages that manufacturers of Rohypnol began issuing pills of just 1 mg, as opposed to the previous dosages of up to 5 mg per pill.

The drug becomes dangerous for students when used to facilitate sexual assault. Specific numbers are hard to obtain in rape cases because victims usually feel embarrassed and often wish to forget the situation.

Angela Demovic, a professor of women's studies, has been following reports of date rape at Tulane. According to her, there have been several Tulane students victimized by men employing roofies this semester. In one instance, an older student and her friend went to a bar together to have a couple drinks. She ended up leaving alone but does not remember leaving.

In her next conscious moment, she found herself in the passenger seat of her car, parked at the end of campus near South Claiborne Avenue. There were apparent signs of sexual assault, and her keys were found in the back seat, leading officials to believe that she was raped in the backseat while she was drugged.

In another case, another student went to a bar in a similar situation with a friend. After having a few drinks, she went to the bathroom, but did not return. Regaining consciousness the next day in an unfamiliar house, the girl did not even remember having gone to the bathroom at all.

The perpetrators in both cases are suspected to be either male Tulane students or local men living near campus who frequent the Uptown bar scene attempting to prey on young women.

Forman seeks to reunite

Ross Doppelt

With such a broad field of candidates, the mayoral election on April 22 is all but certain to result in a runoff between the top two finishers from the primary. Because the electorate remains scattered across the country, polls cannot provide an accurate snapshot of public opinion, so each contender has spent the campaign season surveying the political landscape and chiseling a personal niche.

As one of these many mayoral hopefuls, Ron Forman, president and CEO of the Audubon Nature Institute, has thrown his hat into the ring. Forman prefers to think of himself as a pragmatic manager seeking to reunite the city from the middle ground.

In a traditionally Democratic city, conservative campaigns often lack traction with the lower-income segment of New Orleans' population. Nevertheless, Forman is running as a moderate Democrat, pushing a platform of governmental restraint and fiscal responsibility.

In particular, Forman expressed some reservations about the city maintaining firm control of redevelopment. Commenting on the "green zone" proposals, he exhibited a philosophy of individual initiative.

"We need to present the facts to the smart citizens," Forman said in an interview with the Hullabaloo. "Property owners work their whole lives to own a piece of property, and drawing green circles around it and calling it a 'green space' is totally insensitive."

"Government is not giving them the answers, and private citizens are smart," he continued. "Give them the answers, and they'll come back quickly."

Despite advocating a long-term increase in homeownership, he wants to encourage the immediate re-inhabitation of the city by using government funds to stimulate the market.

"The key is putting money in people's pockets," Forman explained. "You put money in people's pockets — private citizens, rental property owners — they're going to move quickly to make that happen for our city."

To implement these policies, Forman hopes to draw upon his managerial experience with the Audubon Nature Institute. Because the long-time administrator has never held an elected office, the campaign touts the complete reformation of the city's once-deficient parks and zoos as the center piece of his career.

Week-long celebrations clash

Emily Hohenwarter
assistant news editor

The School of Architecture, Newcomb College and Tulane College held week-long celebrations beginning Monday — Architects' Week, Celebrate Newcomb, and Tulane College Week.

Architects' Week took place in the Tremé district of New Orleans.

"A-Week this year has had a much different focus than in years past," said Tony Vanky, president of Architecture Student Government and a fourth-year student. "In the past, the design-build has been around an esoteric, theoretical premise. This year, however, the focus was about the city and about its people."

Architects' Week involved students with Tremé community members.

"This year, the design[s] mean something to people — not just looking cool. As a first step, we're working with a community group in Tremé," Vanky said. "I think that it speaks to the tempered concern the students within the school have regarding our neighbors that has really come out this year. For the first time, A-Week has become selfless and not about some grand personal statement."

Unlike Architects' Week, Celebrate Newcomb was centered on campus. The week is meant to celebrate the history and traditions of Newcomb College. It was sponsored by Newcomb Senate's Committee Organizing Newcomb's Network: Education, Communication and Tradition.

"The week is meant to educate Newcomb students about Newcomb College and its history and promote the traditions of Newcomb College," said Jennifer Daniel, CONNECT Committee Chair.

Daniel hopes that Newcomb traditions will be kept alive in the future under the Renewal Plan.

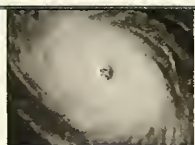

"I hope that we've planned a variety of events that will appeal to a wide range of students. I hope that New-

Tulane swept by No. 6 Rice

Brandon Gomes and the Green Wave pitching staff recorded 21 strikeouts in the series against Rice while the defense allowed 19 hits over the weekend.

Blake Roter

The same shortcomings that have plagued the Tulane baseball team all season showed up again this past weekend as the Green Wave (18-12, 2-4 in C-USA) was swept by the Rice Owls (24-8, 5-1) at Zephyr Field in a rematch of last year's Super Regional that earned Tulane a trip to the College World Series. Inconsistent hitting and untimely mistakes haunted Tulane as it scored only five runs on 11 hits in the series and were swept at home for the first time since 1997.

This week's Baseball America Top 25 rankings reflect the Wave's lackluster performance, dropping them from No. 11 to No. 18 in the nation. Tulane may have dodged an even greater slide as every team ranked from 15 to 25 in last week's poll lost their weekend series, seven of them getting knocked out of the rankings completely. The Green Wave must finish the season in the top 16, in the eyes of the NCAA selection committee, to host a NCAA Tournament regional bracket.

Sophomore right-hander Sean Morgan (4-3) pitched well again for Tulane on Friday night, striking out 10 batters while his fourth save.

"[Degerman's] fastball was good and spotted up well, and he used his curveball very effectively," Tulane senior center fielder Nathan Southard said. "He got behind in a lot of counts, but we didn't take advantage of it early. He threw a lot of balls, and that kept us off balance."

Saturday, Wave starter Brandon Gomes made one major mistake that cost his team a Homecoming victory. Tulane scored a run in the first after Southard and junior first baseman Mark Hamilton

staff writer

The Green Wave completed a season sweep of the Wow Café & Wingery Cup on Tuesday night at Zephyr Field in a 19-5 rout of UNO.

Fourteen different players recorded hits for the Green Wave, who scored the most runs it has in a game this season.

"We had some good at-bats early, got into their bullpen and did a good job [from there]," Tulane head coach Rick Jones said. "I thought the good thing we did today was once we got the lead, we had good at-bats throughout the ball game. It was one of those nights. It was good to win a game, and it was certainly good to see us come through offensively." The Green Wave drew first blood in the top of the first inning. Freshman outfielder Warren McFadden grounded into an RBI fielder's choice to give senior starting pitcher Billy Mohl an early 1-0 lead.

UNO responded with some small ball of their own to take their only lead of the night in the bottom of the first inning. Second baseman Johnny Giavotella and first baseman Greg Wolfe each grounded into a fielders choice to put the Privateers ahead 2-1. The Green Wave then regained the lead in the top of the second.

With the bases loaded and one out, freshman outfielder Matt Riser hit a sacrifice fly to tie the game. Sophomore infielder Cat Everett then walked to load the bases again, and UNO starting pitcher Matt Rogers uncorked a fastball that hit senior outfielder Nathan Southard in the head, forcing in the go-ahead run.

Southard was examined by team trainers and head coach Rick Jones for a few minutes before deciding to stay in the game.

In the top of the third, The Green Wave blew the game wide open. With the bases once again loaded and nobody out, freshman infielder Seth Henry lined a double to left field to up the lead to 5-2, knocking Rogers out of the game.

Junior catcher Ty Wallace followed with a sacrifice fly to put Tulane ahead 6-2.

The Green Wave offense continued to produce in the fourth. McFadden nailed a double to left field to plate a run, then junior infielder Mark Hamilton followed with a line drive single to right field.

Sophomore infielder Brad Emaus continued the onslaught, crushing a three-run home run to left field which pushed the margin to 11-2. The home run was the third of the season for Emaus.

McFadden highlighted the bottom of the fourth with a brilliant diving catch in right field on UNO catcher Alex Webster line drive toward the gap.

Tulane piled on in the fifth inning when Hamilton belted a three-run homer well beyond the right field fence. The blast was Hamilton's team-leading sixth of the season. They would tack on two more to jump ahead 17-2.

The offensive outburst followed a three game sweep at the hands of Rice the previous weekend in which the Green Wave managed just five runs.

"It feels good to get this win," Hamilton said. "Any win is a win, and now we're trying to put the Rice series behind us and start a winning streak."

Mohl upped his record to 4-0 with the win. He left after five innings with the game well in-hand.

Was it a homerun homecoming?

Benny Powell

To say the least, Homecoming this year was interesting; after all it was a "Home-Run Homecoming."

The traditional window painting was creative, and as we found out, the Rice was cooking. Free green and blue snowballs from USG. Sweet. If you wondered when the glory days of Tulane athletics were you should have been at the Hall of Fame induction Saturday morning.

You would have met Will Billon, who helped the Green Wave beat three ranked teams from 1955 to 1957, including No. 6 Auburn. He could have told you, like he told me and the rest of the people there, that he played every minute of the game.

Or if you were there you could have seen the video of JaJuan Dawson's amazing abilities on the field when he helped the Green Wave go 12-0 and win the Liberty Bowl. Or you could have seen Grace Daley's hungry hustle when she helped lead the women's basketball team to three NCAA tournaments.

And if you were there you could have seen Tom Arnold of the Best Damn Sports Show Period who said over the video, "I would be there if I could, but, I have other stuff," important stuff to do."

A few hours after President Scott Cowen and Athletic Director Rick Dickson handed out the Hall of Fame plaques, it was HomeRun Homecoming 2006.

It's understandable that the university was in limbo during football season so option, but Rice for Homecoming should have been reconsidered.

Homecoming is the game where your dad should be there in a drunk stupor professing that he could take on the opponents.

Homecoming is the game where I, yes the creative mind behind the sports section of the Hullabaloo, got in a high school football game and made a tackle; never-mind that I was a wide receiver.

Rice? No. 6 Rice who we squeaked by in game three of last season's Super Regional to get to the College World Series?

It's understandable to play a competitive opponent to try to get people to take the 15-minute ride to Zephyr to watch the game HomeRun in that aspect a reported 5,531 people showed up. But, the competitive opponents would also hit a three-run home run to win the game 3-2.

The Owls let loose and dumped ten hits on the Green Wave on their way to a 9-2 win Sunday.

If the athletic department gets an opportunity to get students to attend games, let's try to get them to come to another. My recommendation: choose a lousy opponent.

The Green Wave football team hasn't quite repeated that perfect 12-0 season from 1998, but they know the recipe to an entertaining homecoming.

This past season they only won two games, but they made sure homecoming was victorious. They defeated Southeastern, NCAA division I-AA Southeastern, 28-21 in front of a reported 15,825 fans in LSU's Tiger Stadium, talk about a home-

Wave starts spring practice

Back in hard plastic and chasing laced leather in plus 80-degree weather, the Green Wave football team started their delayed spring practice Monday on their recently installed practice turf at the Westfeldt Facility to prepare for their 2006 season.

"Every day we've gotten better, the excitement and enthusiasm sometimes can mask improvement, but all three days we've come out with enthusiasm and excitement to get better, and every day so far it's happened," head coach Chris Scelfo said Wednesday when the team had its first open practice.

After going 2-9, playing 11 games in 11 different stadiums last season, the Green Wave had to wait for spring practice to begin on their own field which was ruined by Hurricane Katrina, setting them back weeks behind schedule.

"I don't like (the late start), we are getting bumped into finals, and if someone gets injured it cuts two months out of his rehab," Coach Scelfo said. "But it's no one's fault, we are just happy to be down here."

When the opening horn blared to start practice, the entire coaching staff was present from last season when the Green Wave won the 2005 Disney's Wide World of Sports Spirit Award, and Football Writers of America Association's Annual Courage Award for continuing to compete through the adversity-filled season.

Tulane lost 15 players to graduation, 11 of them starters, along with running back Christian Ducre and linebacker Ace Foyil, who Scelfo believes may not have wanted to be at Tulane or New Orleans with the conditions of the city.

"That group (coaching staff) made a commitment last December, we had several guys offered jobs other places, but we kind of all made a pact," Scelfo said. "The kids that

Mayoral race results in runoff

writing and editing coach

New Orleanians cast their ballots in the mayoral primary Saturday, narrowing the field of candidates down to incumbent C. Ray Nagin and Lt. Gov. Mitch Landrieu. Ron Forman, president and CEO of the Audubon Nature Institute, finished with a respectable third place showing, and Rob Couhig, a prominent New Orleans attorney, came in as a distant fourth.

Because polls have struggled to measure the sentiments of a scattered electorate, last weekend's results provided the first accurate snapshot of public opinion. Despite fighting through media coverage of inopportune remarks and bitter accusations of poor leadership, Nagin exceeded expectations by drawing 38 percent. However, most of the 108,000 voters who participated balked at the notion of another Nagin administration. With citizens demonstrating their reluctance to renew the mayor's mandate, the Landrieu, Forman and Couhig campaigns attracted 29 percent, 17 percent and 10 percent, respectively.

No longer facing challenges from a slate of 20 extraneous candidates, Nagin and Landrieu must battle over the void left by their former opponents before the runoff election on May 20.

Forman changed the race's dynamic considerably Tuesday when he threw his support behind the lieutenant governor. Although the endorsement reflected an overlap of policy initiatives, Landrieu also benefited from his longtime friend's reflections upon personal character.

"It's not the plan now; it's the man," Forman said. He continued, "I feel very comfortable with his leadership in talking about his business approach to rebuilding the city."

In the primary, Forman absorbed what was once a core constituency of the current mayor. As evidenced by the ubiquity of his campaign signs around the Garden District, the Forman platform resonated particularly well with affluent white Uptowners. In addition to benefiting from Nagin's racially charged rhetoric, Forman basked in his image as business-minded outsider.

To reconquer from a precipitous drop in support from whites, Nagin took efforts to expand his base in the black community. In contrast to his 2002 campaign that won a majority across races, the mayor's effort in last weekend's primary was propelled largely by the two-thirds of African-Americans who voted for him.

Landrieu (left) and Nagin will compete in the runoff election for the title of mayor of New Orleans.

While perpetuating his father's longstanding rapport with the black community in New Orleans, the lieutenant governor also presented himself to Nagin's alienated liberal white supporters as a progressive alternative. The Landrieu camp spun the biracial support as a call for cross-cultural unity.

"The truth of the matter is I got an equal amount of support in the African-American and white community, which I think speaks fairly large volumes about what direction the city wants to go in," Landrieu said.

Despite Forman's recent endorsement, the lieutenant governor faces the challenge of motivating voters to turn out at the polls. Although some Forman and Couhig supporters will vote unconditionally against the incumbency, Landrieu may have difficulty wooing conservatives. Nagin exploited this weakness by suggesting on WVL radio that a vote for his opponent would only cement a "political dynasty" in which citizens would "kiss the ring to get things done."

Regardless of his on-air hijinks, the mayor seemed eager to square off against Landrieu in the arena of political discourse.

"It's one-on-one. It's mono a mono. There's no place to hide... You have to stand up as a man and say what you're going to do and tell it like it is, and then the public's going to decide. I love this."

Faculty loss higher than years past

Olivia Watkins

senior staff writer

Tulane University is losing twice as many faculty members at the end of this semester than the average fifteen. Thirty professors throughout the university have decided to accept positions elsewhere. Although many are leaving for better pay or opportunities for work in their fields, Hurricane Katrina and the Renewal Plan made the decision to leave, for several, much easier.

The downsizing of staff members and programs ran the gamut of departments this year. The Renewal Plan accounted for a great number of losses, including entire graduate programs. As these programs are lost, so are professors.

Dr. Molly Travis, the chair of the English Department, has expressed a great deal of concern for the loss of faculty members throughout Tulane. She explained that without many of the graduate programs, professors cannot pursue their work as freely and effectively.

"The people in the humanities are going to feel that they can find a better place elsewhere to do their work," Travis said.

Professors are also under the stresses of knowing that New Orleans may not have seen the end of devastation by hurricanes. Those faculty members who joined the university only recently first had to face Hurricane Ivan and then Katrina. They were displaced for a semester, just like students, and have had to face strained conditions on meeting deadlines for new articles, books and other scholarly work.

The university has also put an increasingly heavy burden on its professors by requiring them to teach additional courses for the spring and Lagniappe semesters. Travis explained that many of those professors who have retired early may have done so because they did not "have the energy to [deal with] a teaching overload."

According to many professors, things might have been different throughout the university if the faculty had felt more involved in the decisions made about their programs after Hurricane Katrina.

Travis said that "there's a sense that there have been so many mandates and dictates coming from the top, the top down. We all understand and we still are in an unsettled state in terms of the university, [but] it's precisely the feeling of being excluded on decision making that has a huge impact on your life."

Some professors, however, are not leaving because of a policy decision or departmental loss. Many are leaving because of the state of New Orleans itself. Those professors with young children have had to consider the state of opportunities for public and private education. Teresa Toulouse, professor of American and Colonial Literature in the English Department, is taking an unpaid leave of absence for a year to move with her husband and daughter to Colorado. Her daughter's school in Mid-City was relocated due to Katrina. By moving to Colorado this summer, she can both be with her husband, who currently works there, and provide her daughter with an education.

While departments like the chemistry department have not lost any faculty members, many others have. Another department that will lose a large number of professors is the political science department. Like Toulouse, Professor Anthony Pereira is asking

Tulane financially on track

contributing writer

Fall 2005 tuition is due Monday and losses match previous predictions. Tulane is expected to recover financially by next year. The school anticipates losses in excess of $100 million for operations this semester, which is in line with earlier estimates.

According to the Accounts Receivable Office, current paid fall tuition is on track with expectations. Tulane Comptroller Doug Harrell explained that the present deficit is due to the extenuating circumstances surrounding Hurricane Katrina.

"The university has consistently operated at a near break even result for the past several years," Harrell said. "Two-thousand-six will be the exception." Katrina caused property damage exceeding $150 million, of which $100 million has been recovered through insurance advances.

Some money has been lost in the area of research grants, but researchers who have lost funding are receiving partial reimbursement by the school to keep things running until they can recover their grants.

The School of Medicine faces unique financial and operating challenges. With the reduced number of patients and the unpredictable post-Katrina New Orleans population, speculating about the long-term effects of the storm on the medical school is difficult. Tulane has found a way to save money. The Renewal Plan reduces the total university budget by $100 million, and private contributions to the university have been several million dollars greater than expected. Although the Lagniappe term is free for those students who paid fall tuition, Harrell says it is expected to generate a "modest cash flow" for the university. The financially positive result to Lagniappe is due to those students who will be paying tuition for the extra semester.

According to Harrell, the high number of returning students this spring is "a great source of relief and pride to the entire Tulane community." Enrollment next year is expected to be on par with previous numbers of students, Harrell added.

Although Cowen and the senior officers are still keeping a close eye on the balance sheet, these factors are expected to combine to level out the Tulane budget by 2008.

"Future success will be achieved by working effectively to manage costs and minimize risks. This recovery will take some time," Harrell said.

Article title offends frat

Ross Doppelt

The Hullabaloo ran an article last week about USG requesting an inquiry into allegations of unsafe behavior at Tulane's chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha, and the accompanying headline disquieted members of the Pike community.

Reading "Fraternity investigated for date rape drugs," the piece's title drew instant attention from brothers on campus. Michael Piper, then-president of the local chapter, was "bombed with phone calls" from his peers and angry alumni. Within days of the issue's publication, Piper exchanged feelings of shock with members at Tulane and the authorities at national headquarters.

"The main question I got from members was 'We hadn't been investigated. What are they talking about?'" he said.

The article itself did not describe any past investigation; rather, it focused on a letter to Tulane's Office of Student Affairs and Pike's national organization regarding complaints about illegal activities at the annual Saturate party. Sarah DeCristofaro, a Hullabaloo contributing writer, made clear that USG did not have any concrete evidence and that the letter was not intended to "perpetuate rumors or hearsay." In addition, DeCristofaro quoted Piper and devoted several paragraphs to Pike's defense of their safety record.

Nevertheless, parties on both sides described the headline as incongruous to the content of the news coverage. Drew Dickson, the editor-in-chief of the Hullabaloo, was out of town the night the staff assembled that week's paper; in retrospect, he described the headline as "unfortunate." While he does not believe the headline was entirely inaccurate, Dickson said it was nevertheless poorly constructed and most likely should not have been used.

Jacob Bolin, director of Fraternity and Sorority Programs, took little issue with the reporting but had reservations about the presentation of the story.

"I don't think that the story matched the headline," Bolin said. "[The article] seems to be accurate as a discussion of what went on in the USG."

'Jacks swept by Tulane's bats

More than two months and 30 games since their last series sweep, the Green Wave (28-15, 5-7 C-USA) was finally able to bring out the brooms again Sunday night after taking three straight from Stephen F. Austin. The Lumberjacks (8-36) could only manage five runs on the weekend while striking out 32 times against Wave pitching. Redshirt-freshman rightfielder Warren McFadden batted .636 on the weekend with six runs scored and six runs batted in and has now hit safely in fourteen straight games.

Friday night's 9-1 victory belonged to the solid right arm of sophomore pitcher Sean Morgan (6-4) and the aluminum bat of junior first baseman Mark Hamilton. Morgan struck out a career-best 13 hitters while throwing his first career complete game. He allowed only one run on two hits and was named Conference USA Pitcher of the Week for the second time in as many weeks and the third time this season.

Hamilton started the offensive onslaught with a home run in the first inning after McFadden drew a two-out walk to give the Wave a 2-0 lead. Sophomore shortstop Cat Everett and McFadden then led off the third with back-to-back singles. Hamilton followed by knocking out his second homer of the day, stretching the advantage to 5-0. The Wave would then add another before the end of the third and three more in the eighth. The lone SFA run came on a solo home run by catcher Steven Hill in the seventh.

"Sean was dominant, just dominant," Tulane head coach Rick Jones said. "Hammy's two home runs gave us some breathing room, and Sean was simply dominant. There's no other way to describe it."

The Green Wave again took the early lead Saturday, scoring five runs in the third inning en route to a 7-1 victory. Junior right-hander Brandon Gomes (5-5) struck out eight men while scattering eight hits over seven innings to earn the win. McFadden was three for three with one run, two RBIs and a walk on the day. The Wave only managed five hits but took advantage of six walks, two errors and a wild pitch to beat the Lumberjacks. Redshirt-freshman Jonathan Garrett and true freshman Nathan Newman each pitched a scoreless inning in relief.

Stephen F. Austin came out hitting Sunday evening as rightfielder David Jeans knocked a leadoff home run to left field. The Wave answered quickly in the bottom half of the first as McFadden slammed a two-run homer to make the score 2-1. A two-run bomb by SFA catcher Steven Hill put the Lumberjacks back ahead 3-2 in the third, before the Wave bats caught fire in a five run fifth inning.

Zurich returns to New Orleans

Jason Lieser

In the months leading up to the 2006 Zurich Classic of New Orleans, the absence of Tiger Woods was arguably the biggest pre-tournament storyline.

No Tiger, no problem.

English Turn's new favorite golfer, apparently, is Masters' champion Phil Mickelson, who easily drew the largest crowds of the opening round. A day after pledging to donate all of this week's winnings to various relief efforts, fans shouted their thanks to Mickelson throughout his round.

"It's an uplifting feeling to come here and play," Mickelson said after shooting a 68 (-4). "It's great to see the excitement and energy. I know there is a lot of things going on in everyone's lives, and it was great to see them out here enjoying themselves."

Several other PGA Tour golfers made donations to New Orleans charities and relief efforts, including a $400,000 gift by Louisiana native David Toms to benefit four area organizations.

"I think all of the players here, obviously they're trying to win a golf tournament, but at the same time they are here to support every effort that's going on here to rebuild the city," Toms said. "There are probably a lot of players here this week that are here for just that reason."

Toms shot a 3-under-par 69, tying him for 39th place.

Despite being the instant crowd-favorite to capture the $1,080,000 championship check, Mickelson finished the first round tied with several other players for 22nd.

Q&A w/ Mark Hamilton

During the past week in which the Green Wave went 4-0 to raise their records to 28-15, 5-7, junior first baseman Mark Hamilton led the Green Wave with four home runs. For the season, Hamilton is tied for first in homeruns (12), second in RBIs (48), third in on base percentage (.455) and fourth in slugging percentage (.622) in Conference USA. Hamilton spoke with The Hullabaloo while the team was on their way to take on East Carolina.

Hullabaloo: You hit four homeruns in the last four games, how does that feel?

Mark Hamilton: It feels good. I have been playing well. Having power at the plate, it feels good when you are playing well.

HH: Your four home runs came in the first and the last of the four games, the middle two games you went 0-8, what about that?

MH: I had to make adjustments. Hopefully, I'll continue on what I started on from the last game.

HH: Overall, how has this season been?

MH: It has been all right, kind of frustrating because we haven't played to our potential. We've played well lately. Hopefully, that'll carry over for the rest of the year.

HH: How do you feel your role has changed since last year with the team leaders from last year leaving?

MH: I feel my job is the same. Last year I had to step to the plate and drive in runners, this year it's the same. I believe we have the same amount of talent as last year. We have Warren McFadden batting almost .400 (.397); it's just a different surrounding cast.

HH: You all are participating in five series before Conference USA tournament. How far do you think the team can go?

MH: I feel that we have a real good chance in our upcoming series. We should be a strong contender in the regionals and go far in the playoffs like we did last year.

Scelfo blows whistle on Green's run

Despite committing four early turnovers, the Green team, led by redshirt junior quarterback Lester Ricard and starting running back Matt Forté, stormed back to finish the 2006 Green Wave Spring Game in an 18-18 tie with head coach Chris Scelfo's white team. The spring game, the first the team has held in six years, marked the end of a successful spring practice for the Green Wave.

"I thought [the game] was very competitive," Scelfo said. "The thing I'm disappointed in is the dropped passes, turnover and penalties. But I think all of those are correctable, and I do know this: I think the kids really got after each other, and overall, I think our spring went well."

Ricard played the entire game and completed 16 of 26 passes for 170 yards with two interceptions and two touchdowns, one to junior Preston Brown and another to freshman Brian King, who led all receivers with five catches for 71 yards.

"Lester looked really good after he settled down," Scelfo said. "He made some bad decisions early and threw a couple of balls he knows better than to throw. But when he settled down you could tell he and Forté were on the same page."

Forté ran for a game-high 146 yards on 19 carries. Forté also caught three passes for 13 yards and proved to be a home run threat with a 45-yard touchdown run to put the Green team on the board.

"Matt has had the best spring since he's been here," Scelfo said. "He's really dedicated himself and played well."

The White team went ahead early on a halfback pass from Ray Boudreaux to freshman Jeremy Williams, who finished the game with three catches for 99 yards. The white team scored two more times, one on a touchdown pass from freshmen Anthony Scelfo to Charles Harris and another on a 27-yard interception return by sophomore defensive lineman Frank Morton.

Morton led the defense with 1.5 sacks, while sophomore Avery Williams had a sack of his own. Redshirt-junior linebacker Terence Peterson led the team with eight tackles. Scelfo was especially impressed with Jordan Ellis, who collected three tackles and recovered a fumble, and James Dillard, who had five tackles of his own.

"I think the defense has played well this spring," junior Israel Route said. "We lost a lot of seniors, especially at linebacker, but the new guys are a lot farther along than everyone thought they would be, especially considering how much they had to learn. They're already athletic enough, it's just a matter of learning their assignments." The Green team overcame a pair of early fumbles and Ricard's interceptions by reeling off three straight touchdowns of their own. The 10-yard touchdown pass from Ricard to Preston Brown on the Green team's final drive tied the score at 18. The White team had the ball deep in the Green team's territory, but Coach Scelfo ended the game before anything could transpire.

Other notables were sophomore safety Joe Goosby, who broke up three passes while collecting four tackles and an interception off a tipped pass, and Antonio Harris, who had five tackles and a forced fumble.

Tulane won't hold official practice again until August, as the 2006 season begins Sept. 9 at Houston.

LEE SANO/PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR

The Green team led by quarterback Lester Ricard and running back Matt Forté has to fight to tie the teams first spring game in six seasons.

Unspeakable tragedy and loss has been experienced by those living in New Orleans and the Gulf Coast region this year. Hurricane Katrina has shaped our futures, changing the political, interpersonal, and even academic paradigms in which we live.

Let this yearbook serve as a reminder that, despite our struggles, the Tulane community will come together and work towards the future with hope, fervor, and an intensity unique to the Big Easy.

On behalf of the Tulane Jambalaya Yearbook staff, we would like to thank you for all your support.

The Tulane Hullabaloo

it's in the details

Dinwiddie Hall was built in 1923 for $182,553 and was originally the Science Building. It was renamed for Tulane President and Math Professor A. B. Dinwiddie in 1936. Top right: A Tulane "T" decorates the area over an archway on Dinwiddie Hall. Several Tulane buildings have the letter "T" worked into their decor. Middle right: the courtyard in front of Dinwiddie is a good place to hang out in between classes. Make sure to go check out the petrified tree trunk on display. Bottom right: The ornate window surrounds on Dinwiddie frame a reflection of the greenery surrounding the building.

Year in Review

2006-2007 IS THE YEAR OF THE PEOPLE! People marched, demonstrated, fought, argued and voted to make their voices heard. People put the Democrats in control of Congress. People demanded an exit strategy from Iraq. Immigrants marched to show how valuable they are to the American economy. Scientists destroyed (okay, demoted) a planet. And screaming, text-messaging fans took a grey-haired soul man and turned him into an American Idol.

We became the media. MySpace, Facebook, YouTube, and SecondLife were the places to see and be seen. And since it was difficult to leave your house when you lived online, we relied on iTunes, Blockbuster and Netflix to deliver movies directly to our doors. DVRs and online downloads let US determine when we would watch our favorite TV shows. And our increased online music purchases have further crippled the sales of compact discs.

We grew and we learned. We discovered that dark chocolate was good for lowering the blood pressure, while Cherry and Mint Chocolate were good for making calls. We found out that high school was a lot more fun as a musical. We used our purchasing power to fight AIDS in South Africa, and we bought David Beckham for $50 million. We declared war on global warming, and were relieved when the only hurricanes to hit the east coast this year brought home the Stanley Cup.

And we finally got some recognition. For our impact on the world in 2006, we the people were named Time magazine's "Person of the Year." And for good reason: this year's accomplishments will shape the future. They will forever affect our daily lives. And they will live always in our hearts, in our minds, and in the pages of this yearbook.

GERALD RUDOLPH FORD JR. 1913-2006

Gerald Ford, the 38th president of the United States, dies at his home in Rancho Mirage, CA at the age of 93. Ford became president after Richard Nixon resigned in the wake of the Watergate scandal, and during his two-and-a-half-year term, Ford sought to restore the nation's confidence in the basic institutions of government.

Pluto No Longer a Planet

Still Loveable Cartoon Dog, Astronomers Assure.

Some 2,500 astronomers from 75 countries met in Prague. The planet debate was often spited and sometimes ugly. Some scientists proposed expanding the number of planets to 12. Pluto, its moon Charon, and two other objects, Xena and Ceres, would be planets. Other astronomers argued that some of the smaller, icy balls should be in a new lesser class of planets called "dwarf planets."

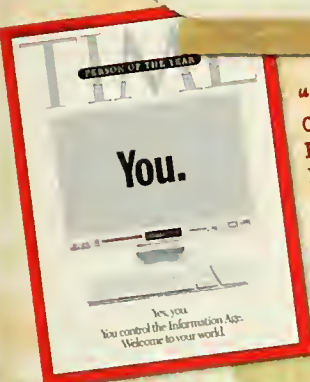

Poor, puny Pluto. After it was discovered in 1930, it basked in the glory of being the ninth planet in our solar system.

AND YET, PARIS HILTON IS STILL A STAR

Pluto was demoted to being a 'dwarf planet' by the International Astronomical Union, leaving only eight planets in our solar system. Science textbooks everywhere need to be re-written.

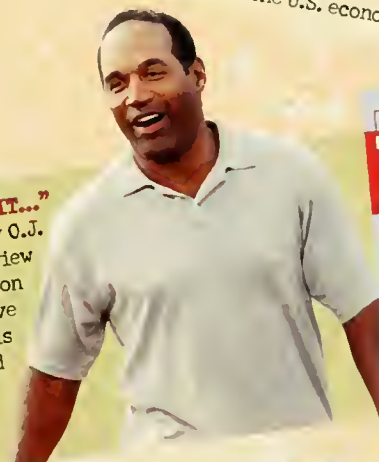

"BUT MOM, WHY DO I NEED A CURFEW? I'M TIME MAGAZINE'S PERSON OF THE YEAR."

Because so many everyday people are contributing to the online community with blogs, videos, news, music and more, Time Magazine has named you, yes YOU, their Person of the Year.

"IF I DID IT..."

ReganBooks announces a book by O.J. Simpson as well as a Fox TV interview entitled "If I Did It," in which Simpson would describe how he would have committed the 1994 slayings of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman. The "ill-considered" project is cancelled after much public criticism.

STEVE IRWIN, 1962-2006

Steve "The Crocodile Hunter" Irwin dies after being stung in the chest by a stingray while filming an ocean documentary. He is survived by his wife Terri and daughter Bindi Sue.

UNO DE MAYO

In protest of proposal H.R. 4437, which would make felons of illegal aliens, immigrants stage a demonstration on May 1, 2006. The supporters abstain from buying, selling, working, and attending school for the day to show the extent to which illegal immigrants' labor is needed for the U.S. economy.

NUKES ARE A NO-NO

North Korea conducts an underground nuclear weapons test and claims their troops are prepared for nuclear war, alarming the international community and sparking calls for tightened sanctions.

Technology

GRAPHIC CONTENT

The release of Sony's $600 game console causes long lines and violence while kids of all ages camp out overnight before stores open. Since the stores sell out so quickly, the trend is to buy them and immediately put them up for sale online - some PS3s sell for as much as $9,000 on eBay.

SOUND CLIPS

Apple releases a colorful new version of their popular iPod nano mp3 player, and they completely redesign the iPod shuffle to be the size of a matchbook with a built-in clip to improve "wearability."

MINI-COPTERS

ALL OVER THE MAP

Google Earth is definitely the coolest way to scour the globe without leaving your house. The addictive satellite image-based mapping program is fun, easy to use, and indispensable for the "directionally challenged."

THE REVOLUTION IS CALLING
